'Shoot to Kill' Looters, Flood Deputies Told; 124 Die, 150 Missing

30 Towns Lightless as Sheriff Sends Out Extra Patrols.

Areas Evacuated Below Big Dams

15,000 Homeless; Town of Atwood Virtually Swept Off Map.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 4.—The toll of dead and missing in southern California's worst storm disaster in history soared past the 250 mark tonight as rescue crews dug through mud and debris for bodies of victims over a flood—slashed area of 30,000 square miles.

There were 124 known dead and more than 150 reported missing, many of them believed dead, at noon today.

Widespread looting was reported and Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz ordered deputy sheriffs to patrol all outlying areas, with orders to "shoot to kill."

"Bring them in alive if possible—but bring them in," the sheriff's broadcast said.

15,000 Homeless.

More than 15,000 persons are homeless in this rich and populous area where 3,000,000 people live. The town of Atwood virtually was swept off the map when the Santa Ana River changed its course and swept over the townsite.

Scenes of destruction and horror occurred as a 15-foot wall of water poured down over the town while terrified residents fled. Many were caught in the current and swept as far as Anaheim, several miles away.

The rich citrus farming areas east of Los Angeles were cut off from communication. No word has been received for two days from such isolated sections as Victorville and Barstow, out on the Mojave desert. At the last report, four were dead, 36 missing and 600 homeless in the two desert towns.

Los Angeles Least Hurt.

Although the floods were receding, with millions of tons of yellow water pouring off into the Pacific Ocean, there was still serious danger of dams bursting. Populations of suburban areas above Los Angeles and Pasadena, and of small towns near the lower edge of the Tahachapi range, have been evacuated temporarily.

Los Angeles proper suffered least of the entire area, only eight deaths being reported, with 23 missing. The city was under several inches of water at height of the flood, and damage to property was enormous.

Twenty-five persons were killed and nearly 2,000 were homeless in the citrus belt centers of San Bernardino and Riverside, 50 miles east of Los Angeles.

The only physical communication with areas outside the flood districts was by airplane. Traffic between Los Angeles and the port cities of Long Beach, Wilmington and San Pedro was restored today, although most of the highways are virtually impassable.

The worst single disaster was the collapse of flood dams on the Santa Ana River, which swept an esti-

Post Writer on First Airliner Into Los Angeles Flood Area

Sees Rivers Ordinarily the Size of Rock Creek Make Islands of Housetops With Tops of Phone Poles Marking Roads.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 4.—In a blaze of sunlight that seemed to be mocking the devastated scenes it revealed below me, I flew into this flood-ridden city tonight—to cover a horse race.

On the first plane to get through from the East since last Wednesday, a Transcontinental and Western airliner loaded with mail, I saw raging rivers, hardly the size of Rock Creek on my previous visits, making shimmering islands of housetops and swirling around piles of iron and stone once parts of bridges. Tops of telegraph poles dotted the war above inundated highways.

HAIGHT.

Half of Pasadena's famous "Suicide Bridge" remained standing, but a temporary span already was in place and traffic was moving, an example of the speed with which southern California is emerging from the greatest storm in the history of the State.

As we neared this city, where 000,000 in property damage, the swirling waters took a toll of $10,- work of rehabilitation became increasingly evident. Everywhere below relief workers, their ranks augmented by 4,000 men from WPA rolls, dug into mountains of silt left by the receding flood. Homes, all but buried by the mud, were reappearing. Bridges were being repaired, highways cleared.

Senate Affirms Nomination of Jackson, 62 to 4

Austin and King Repeat Oppisition; Norris Rises to Defense.

By the United Press.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Robert H. Jackson as Solicitor General over objections of Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), of Vermont, who charged the New Deal's 44-year-old trust-buster would foster "centralization of government and regimentation of the people."

The vote was 62 to 4.

Jackson, now Assistant Attorney General and frequently mentioned as President Roosevelt's choice for Governor of New York, succeeds Stanley F. Reed, who resigned to become a Supreme Court justice.

Austin and Senator William F. King (Democrat), Utah, vigorously opposed the nomination in committee, due to Jackson's utterances on business. They were the only dissenters on the floor. Austin carried on the onslaught until today, when Jackson found a champion in

Parking Meter Proposal Snags District Budget

Senate Quorum Is Lacking After Passing All but One Amendment.

By James D. Secrest.

With all but a final amendment approved, the District supply bill struck a snag late yesterday in the Senate when a quorum could not be raised to vote on a provision authorizing the Commissioners to install parking meters in Washington.

As a result, passage of the $48,-000,000 measure was delayed until Monday, when there will be a roll call on the parking meter amendment, which was offered by Chairman Thomas, of the District appropriations sub-committee. Thomas moved to suspend the rules shortly before 6 o'clock after Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, had raised a point of order against the amendment.

Burke countered with a point of no quorum and when the clerk called the roll only 13 senators responded. Even Majority Leader Barkley had left the chamber after

17 Senile Men Regain Youth In Tests at Johns Hopkins

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 4.—Youth long sought by Ponce de Leon has been partially found by 17 patients at Johns Hopkins Hospital, two faculty members in the medical school announced tonight after a year's test of testosterone.

The rejuvenation fluid, a synthetic male sex hormone first made in Switzerland two years ago, brought "extremely satisfactory and in some instances astounding" results to the 17 patients, Dr. Samuel A. Vest, instructor in urology, reported tonight at a meeting of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty. Dr. Vest and Dr. John Eager Howard, instructor in medicine, collaborated in the tests.

He pronounced the chemical compound "the most promising thing ever brought out" in the eternal search for youth.

Dr. Vest and Dr. Howard said they had seen their patients' personalities change under the influence of the drug, beards took on a new growth, skin formerly dry and sallow became ruddy and oily, voices deepened and in some cases normal male faculties were rejuvenated.

The drug is administered by hypodermic injections. The treatments must be continued, since the body soon uses up the supply of synthetic hormone.

Marines Halt Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, March 4.—United States Marine guards were reported by police today to have halted a force of 75 Japanese soldiers at the Bubbling Well road boundary of the American defense sector.

The Marines held up the Japanese patrol for half an hour at the entrance to the American defended zone of Shanghai's international settlement, before permitting the Japanese to proceed.

No comment was made by Marine headquarters but it was presumed a protest would be made to Japanese authorities.

American Marines have had to turn back Japanese armed patrols attempting to enter the foreign area to "supervise" Japanese there. After previous American representations the Japanese had agreed to forbid their patrols to cross the American defense line.

On the central China front, Japanese army officials said, four powerful Japanese detachments now are lined up solidly on a 20-mile front in southwestern Shansi, prepared to use artillery, infantry and aviation to sweep the last Chinese troops from the province.

Chinese, however, declared that Linfen, where Japanese had said two of their columns joined, still was defended by several regiments of Chinese "dare-to-die" soldiers.

The next Japanese objective apparently was Wensi, less than 40 miles north of the Yellow River. Wensi is an important Chinese military post and it was expected the Chinese would make their last-ditch stand there.

Man Who Tricked Self Into Alcatraz Asks for Pardon

Attorney General Cummings yesterday asked President Roosevelt to grant executive clemency to a man who swindled his way into Alcatraz for a crime he did not commit.

Cummings told the President the Federal Bureau of Prisons had discovered that Rollie (Hardrock Roy) Rector conspired with two fellow prisoners awaiting trial for robbing the First National Bank of St. Jo, Tex., to identify him as their companion.

Trying to escape confinement in a Texas prison, Rector told Prison Bureau authorities he hoped conviction on the Federal charge would take him to Atlanta Pentitentiary, where life might prove easier.

Officials explained that if Rector received a Presidential pardon he would be returned to Texas to complete a sentence for robbery.

Hunt for Airliner Called Hopeless

Fresno, Calif., March 4 (AP).—Eleven planes scanned hundreds of miles of jagged, snow-blanketed terrain today for the airliner lost in Tuesday night's storm.

Leaders admitted there was only "one chance in 10,000" that the Transcontinental and Western airliner escaped from the treacherous, storm-ridden area without killing all nine persons aboard. Ground searchers deployed over the Castle Peak region, 80 miles north of here, failed to find any trace of the plane.

Comptroller Charges U.S. Fiscal Fraud

Congress Gets Report of 'Illegal' Spending by the Treasury.

Reports Provide Fuel for Senate Enemies of Reorganization.

Senate opponents of Administration reorganization proposals, abolishing the Comptroller General's office and authorizing the President to revamp Federal bureaus, received heavy ammunition yesterday from Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott.

Complaints of alleged illegal Government spending by the Treasury and other Federal agencies, and "irregular procurement" of supplies by WPA, National Guard officers and others, were made in reports sent to Congress by Elliott.

The reorganization bill, under sharp attack in the Senate since Monday, would transfer the comptroller's day-by-day controls over spending to the Budget Director and create an Auditor General to audit accounts after money was spent.

Vandenberg Assails Bill.

The reports were received as Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, delivered the first Republican broadside on the bill, which he called a "snare and delusion" and a "disservice to the national welfare."

Opening Democratic sallies by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, were directed particularly at proposals to abolish the General Accounting Office as a Congressional check on spending.

Spokesmen for the Senate opposition said the Elliott reports received at the Capitol yesterday cited 100 cases of "illegal contracts and expenditures" made by Government agencies.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, is expected to discuss them in a speech against the Byrnes bill in the next few days. He will argue that the bill in effect will put current control under the executive branch, which does the spending.

The first of the two reports made by Elliott complained the Treasury was burdening the Comptroller's office by refusing to comply with laws prescribing methods for handling outstanding Federal checks.

Treasury Disobeyed Rule.

It said the Treasury was required to deposit in a trust fund account amounts of outstanding checks not presented for payment within a full fiscal year after the year in which they were issued. It said the Treasury had declined to follow this course despite repeated urging by the General Accounting Office.

"The Treasury department is assuming authority to maintain unauthorized accounts pursuant to the provisions of statutes which have been repealed, and at the same time demanding that the outstanding check lists be prepared by this office in a manner which will permit the continued maintenance of the un-

New York, March 4 (AP).—Explosions described as "sounding like an earthquake" destroyed a brewery building in upper Manhattan today, took at least three lives, injured 15 persons and spread incalculable damage about the crowded neighborhood.

Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy said the blasts apparently were caused by the ignition of coal dust in the boiler rooms of the Horton Brewery by an electric spark from a welding machine.

Earlier an explosion and $100,000 fire wrecked the upper floors of Brooklyn's old Polytechnic Institute, driving 450 students and faculty members from their classrooms. No one was injured. The explosion occurred in the chemical laboratory.

Twenty-five years ago Senator George W. Norris, the Independent, of Nebraska, entered the United States Senate. Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, rounded out 25 years of service in the Senate yesterday, still that rare phenomenon on Capitol Hill, "a politician unafraid."

The 76-year-old prairie philosopher, who overthrew Cannonism when he was a young member of the House, who voted against America's entry into the World War and was branded a "Twentieth Century Benedict Arnold," who once boldly announced that he was a member of no church, and who bolted his party in 1928 to support Al Smith, arrived at his twenty-fifth anniversary in the Senate in a mellow mood, worried about unemployment, but optimistic as to the future.

Move to Repeal Salary Listings Irks Roosevelt

Publicity for Big Incomes Is Matter of Morality, President Asserts.

By Robert C. Albright.

Tax bill provision for repeal of the salary publicity law drew the fire of the President yesterday, as the House battled through another day on a revenue measure framed in other respects to Administration specifications.

Ways and Means Committee Democrats, who followed White House and Treasury advice in modifying the undivided profits and capital gains levies, dropped all provision to make public salaries in excess of $15,000 paid by corporations.

The President said there was no valid reason why this should be repealed. He said publication of such salaries was a question of simple morality.

Fight on Special Privilege to Go on, He Asserts as Sixth Year Starts.

President Roosevelt yesterday began the sixth year of his Administration with a reiteration of the general objectives of the New Deal and a declaration that the important thing was that after five years "the old ship of state is still on the same course."

Mr. Roosevelt made these comments at his semi-weekly press conference after returning from church services with his Cabinet, which marked the only formal observance of the fifth anniversary of the inauguration of the New Deal.

The President declared his fight on special privilege and, in behalf of a more abundant life for the entire Nation would go on. He said an increase in mass purchasing power was an immediate objective of the Administration, and he

D. C. Boy Gangster Bares Plot To Kill Watchman, Rob Office

A teen-age gang's plot to murder the night watchman of a northeast Washington warehouse and rob the cash box was exposed yesterday by one of three members of the "crime fraternity" under arrest in the First Precinct station.

The robbery, as disclosed to First Precinct Detective Sergts. William Shippman and William Faucett, was planned for last night. Just a few hours before it was to happen, the last member of the "gang" was caught in a succession of raids on northeast Washington homes in which officers seized 21 revolvers.

Two members of the "fraternity"—one of the youths told police he was just "initiated"—are members of the District National Guard.

The troubled conscience of a member of the "fraternity" caused him to reveal, after several hours of questioning, the care with which the gang planned details of the alleged murder-robbery conspiracy.

The detectives said the scene of the crime was to have been a plant, where, the youth said, the gang learned the week's receipts accumulated until Saturday morning, waiting for an armored truck to take them to the bank.

Only one man guards the money, said to total thousands of dollars. He is the watchman whose death allegedly was plotted.

Action Seen as Backing for Hints Morgan Should Resign.

Norris Condemns Official as 'Enemy'

'Rule or Ruin' Policy Is Laid to Agency Chief by Colleagues.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday authorized publication of a sharp attack on Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The critical assault, both detailed and extensive, was made by the other TVA board members, David E. Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, in a report to the White House dated January 18.

The President withheld comment on the feud which has split the TVA directorate wide open for more than a year, but his action was construed at once as silent approval of the report's strong hints that Chairman Morgan should resign.

Norris Joins Attack.

On Capitol Hill, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, father of the TVA, condemned Chairman Morgan in unsparing language as "an enemy of the TVA." Norris said:

"He went in as a friend and believer and now look at him! He is the best representative of the power trust that the power trust ever had.

"He does nothing but draw his salary in the TVA while he spends all his time writing articles and issuing statements against it.

"There were never any disagreements in the TVA until Chairman Morgan got mad. When Lilienthal's term expired, Chairman Morgan told the President that he would resign from the board if Lilienthal was reappointed. The President felt he didn't want Morgan to resign, but that he couldn't do without Lilienthal. That made Morgan mad, and he hasn't done anything since that's amounted to a damn."

"Rule or Ruin" Charged.

The document released through the President charged Morgan with:

A "rule or ruin" policy.

Constantly attacking the motives, integrity and good faith of the other directors "by innuendo, indirection and aspersion."

Harassing and interfering with key staff members.

Roosevelt Sees Hope Fading for Wage-Hour Bill

But Mrs. Norton Declares She Will Continue to Fight for Passage.

While once more affirming his desire to see a "ceiling" over hours and "floor" under wages, President Roosevelt admitted yesterday that prospects for passage of a wage-hour bill this session were dubious.

Shortly after the President had made this statement at his press conference, Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said:

"No matter who concedes defeat, I shall continue to fight for passage of wage-hour legislation."

Fight to Continue.

Mrs. Norton's remark was in reaction to reports of the President's statement and followed revelation earlier this week that Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn had told President Roosevelt passage of any legislation affecting wages and hours, other than a resolution providing committee study of the problem for a year, was impossible at this session.

Mrs. Norton said:

"Two things militate severely against passage of a wage-hour bill this session. One is the depression and the other is the fact that this is an election year. The prospects aren't encouraging, to say the least.

"But the principle will be established sooner or later. Members who voted to recommit and kill the bill last session only postponed the inevitable. Passage of a new wage-hour bill, if not this session, will come next time. I intend to continue the fight."

Opposition Slipping.

The latest wage-hour proposal, which several members of the House Labor Committee have approved tentatively, would make a graduated approach toward minimum wages and maximum hours. The "floor" under wages would be set the first year at 30 cents an hour and would rise each year for three years to 40 cents. The "ceiling" over hours would be set first at 44 hours per week and would be graduated in three years down to 40 hours. Administration would be centered in the Department of Labor.

Leaders of the wage-hour opposition, noting their antagonism to the new proposal, admitted privately yesterday that some votes had been lost since recommitment last session. They said they placed their faith in the House Rules Committee, which last year refused for many months to grant the wage-hour bill a favorable rule so it could reach the floor, forcing use of the petition method to get the bill out.

So far as is known, House Rules Committee members have not changed their position since last session.

Politics and People

Chief Objection to Reorganization Bill Is That It Gives President Legislative Power.

By Franklyn Waltman

Foremost among the objections to the President's Government reorganization bill is the contention that it constitutes a surrender on the part of Congress of powers which under our constitutional form of government should never be delegated to the executive branch of the Government.

WALTMAN.

What is there to that contention? In the first place, the bill confers on the President authority to rearrange, with certain exceptions, the Federal Government as he sees fit. But under the bill he can do more than that. It gives him the authority to nullify or modify policies approved by Congress. Indeed, it is open to question whether the bill as it now stands does not give the President power to initiate policies—all of which is an exercise of legislative power.

Where is such authority found in the bill? It is found in that section marked "power of the President," which authorizes him to issue Executive orders for the reorganization of the Government. Not only may he transfer, regroup, consolidate and reorganize the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, with a few exceptions; but he also is authorized to "abolish the whole or part of any agency, or the functions thereof" and to "prescribe the name and the functions of any agency affected by any such Executive order, and the title, powers and duties of its executive head."

We are concerned for the moment here with the use of that word "functions." Stated simply, the bill empowers the President to "abolish" in whole or part the "functions" of any Federal agency, except those specifically put beyond his reach, which include the quasijudicial independent agencies, the Federal Reserve Board, the District of Columbia Government and the general auditing office.

The only restrictions imposed on the President in abolishing the functions of any agency to which the law applies, or in prescribing functions of any agency affected by an Executive order issued under this legislation, are that he act in accord with the standard prescribed by the bill and that he shall not "create or establish any new agency to exercise any functions which are not expressly authorized by law in force on the date of the enactment of this act."

This latter restriction, let it be noted, applies only to the creation or establishment of "any new agency." It does not assert that Mr. Roosevelt cannot prescribe for an already existing agency functions outside of existing law. As a restriction against the President exercising legislative power it is inadequate.

But what is meant by the term "functions?" The word is not defined in the pending bill, although it was defined in the original measure laid before Congressional committees by the President's Reorganization Committee. There it was defined as including "any rights, privileges, powers, duties or functions, or any part thereof." In the Mead bill pending in the House the term is defined as meaning "any rights, privileges, powers, immunities, duties, authority or function."

Thus it seems reasonably clear that if the Byrnes bill is passed as it now stands, the President could abridge or abolish the rights, duties or authority of any of the applicable agencies. Thus, if Mr. Roosevelt decided he no longer wished the Federal Government to contribute Federal aid for highway building, he could abolish the Bureau of Public Roads in the Agricultural Department.

For example, if he decided he did not wish that bureau to contribute as much to highway building as it is now doing, he could "abolish" part of its functions. It so happens that the President has made such a proposal to Congress. There is widespread opposition on Capitol Hill to that proposal. Nothing so far has been done about it.

If the Byrnes bill is passed in its present form, Mr. Roosevelt would not need Congressional action to curtail Federal aid for highway building. By an Executive order he could "abolish" in part the functions of the Bureau of Public Roads.

If Congress did not like that action it could, under the pending legislation, adopt within 60 days a bill declaring the Executive order invalid. Mr. Roosevelt could veto that bill and it would require a two-thirds vote of both House and Senate to override that veto in order that the will of Congress might prevail.

Thus, in an important matter of policy Congress would be impotent unless two-thirds of its membership stood together. It is not a question here whether the Federal aid for highways should be reduced. As a matter of fact, the author of this column thinks it should be and stands with the President on that. The point here is that such action should be taken in an orderly, democratic constitutional manner.

Not quite so clear as the President's authority under this bill to abolish functions of an agency is his authority to prescribe functions not authorized by Congress. But the existence of such a doubt, raised by Senator Harry F. Byrd on the Senate floor, indicates the defective nature of the bill.

On its face, there is nothing in this bill which would prevent the President from transferring part of the functions of, say, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to another agency, and broadening the present functions of the RFC to do things not provided by existing law. Such action might be unconstitutional, but it would be some time before the courts could check use of the power.

This is not a fanciful hypothesis in view of the use of the RFC in 1933 to raise the price of gold as a part of the plan for devaluation of the dollar—a function never specifically conferred on the RFC by Congress, and one that Congress had not demonstrated any intention of conferring.

Reorganization of the Federal Government is a thorny problem, as experience has demonstrated. Agencies cannot be shifted around and consolidated unless their functions go with them. That is obvious. But the President should not be given a broad, vague power to "abolish" functions or to "prescribe" functions that do not now exist. That power, under the Constitution, belongs to Congress.

If it is not intended that the President should exercise a function which properly belongs to Congress, the bill in unmistakable language should restrict him from doing so. If such language is impossible without impairing the authority to carry out needed reorganization, the Wheeler amendment requiring Congressional ratification of the President's actions should be adopted. There can be no third choice if constitutional, representative government is to be maintained in this country.

Hearing on Coal Rates Recessed to March 23

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday adjourned hearings in the long drawn-out Pocahontas coal rate case to March 23. Yesterday's session was devoted to technical testimony by which coal-carrying railroads—the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Norfolk & Western, and the Virginian—sought to disprove cost estimates previously offered by witnesses for the property owners' committee.

Merchant Fleet Report Omits Labor Clause

House Committee Action Appears a Victory for Miss Perkins.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The House Merchant Marine Committee yesterday favorably reported the Bland bill to rehabilitate the American Merchant Marine, but failed to adopt the recommendations of Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Maritime Commission and now Ambassador to Great Britain, for improving the maritime labor situation. The committee said it would "continue its study" of the recommendations.

Kennedy, after characterizing labor conditions as "disgraceful," recommended last November that mediation machinery be set up for handling disputes and that the Coast Guard train 500 American youths annually for the merchant marine.

Victory for Miss Perkins.

The House committee's rejection of the two proposals at this time represented a victory for Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. Miss Perkins, voicing the views of the C. I. O., contended that the maritime industry, was not "ripe" for mediation legislation.

Kennedy, on the eve of his departure for London, replied that if the industry was not ripe for mediation, then it was "overripe for ruin."

The C. I. O. said this was "pure phrase making."

Those favoring the labor legislation had anticipated trouble on the House side of the Capitol. This being an election year, and with most members courting C. I. O. support, they pointed out, only one thing might help passage of the legislation in the House—a clear-cut indorsement by President Roosevelt. Thus far the President has not taken sides in the Kennedy-Perkins argument.

Report Due This Week.

The Senate Commerce and Labor Committees, which have been holding hearings for several weeks on the new merchant marine legislation, are expected to make a report this week. There is said to be more sentiment for the mediation plan on the Senate side than on the House side, although a compromise plan has been rumored.

With respect to the scheme for Coast Guard training of merchant sailors, the Senators are said to feel that the Maritime Commission already has authority to order such training. The C. I. O. maritime unions have indicated that they would favor a training plan, provided labor had a voice in it. However, Harry Lundeberg, head of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, is unalterably opposed to it on the ground that there are already too many American merchant sailors, and that the Coast Guard woul "instill in them a certain spirit of loyalty," calculated to outweight union interests.

The bill reported yesterday by Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, provides for a number of important changes in the 1936 merchant marine act.

It would extend construction subsidies to transoceanic aviation on the same basis as they are now available to surface ships. Kennedy predicted in his report to Congress that giant flying boats soon would provide serious competition for luxury liners.

Would Fix Payments.

The bill would enable ship owners to purchase vessels from the Maritime Commission with a down payment of 25 per cent of the sale cost instead of the present requirement of 25 per cent of the American construction cost.

To aid intercoastal shipping and rehabiltiate Pacific Coast shipyards, the committee wrote into the bill provisions authorizing payment of operating subsidies to fast merchant vessels in that trade and permitting assignment of construction work on all coasts without regard to the lowest bids. However, to be eligible for these subsidies, intercoastal vessels would be required to have speeds of at least 16½ knots and accommodate 200 passengers. Thus they would be available as transports or hospital ships in time of war.

Housing Plan Used.

The bill also would authorize the Government to insure mortgages for construction of intercoastal, coastwise and inland waterway vessels, extending the principle of the Federal Housing act to the shipping industry.

The committee refused to approve an amendment to permit the transfer to foreign registry of any subsidized vessel upon cancelation of the subsidy contract by the Government without cause or where there was no fault by the contractor.

It also refused to lift the $25,000 salary limitation on salaries of officials in the subsidized shipping companies.

McNutt Aide Mate Must Pay for Trip

By the Associated Press.

The Comptroller General yesterday refused to pay $505 Indianapolis - to - Manila transportation costs for Paul B. Headdy, the husband of a secretary employed by Paul V. McNutt, American High Commissioner to the Philippines.

The Comptroller General ruled that since Headdy was not a dependent of Mrs. Mary Buchanan Headdy, he was not entitled to Government transportation.

Neighborhood Council Asks for Play in Schools

Opening of schools for evening recreation under competent supervision has been recommended by the executive committee of the First Ward Neighborhood Council. A survey undertaken by the committee among boys between 7 and 17 revealed 838 in need of constructive recreational guidance.

Suitable leadership was named as the greatest problem in devising an adequate recreational program for boys in a report by Dr. Carl Douglas Wells, of George Washington University, presented to the meeting by Robert St. James.

U. S. Broadcast To Brazil Marks Closer Contact

New Station Is Expected to Counter Propaganda From Europe.

Friendly greetings to the people of Brazil and others who speak Portuguese in South America were extended last night by United States officials as General Electric dedicated its newly-assigned Pan American short-wave channel linking this country with the Latin Americas.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles hailed the broadcast as establishing a new medium of good will between Brazil and the United States. Welles' address was read by Laurence Duggan, chief of the State Department division of American republics.

"The broadcasting of this initial program to Brazil acquires special significance in view of the uninterrupted harmony that has prevailed in the relations between that great republic and the United States," he said.

Sees New Harmony.

"Closer contacts in the cultural and artistic field cannot fail to redound to the advantage of this harmony that has so long characterized the policy of Brazil and the United States."

McNinch, recently named by President Roosevelt as chairman of a committee to study international broadcasting, with especial regard to propaganda transmitted to Latin-American countries by European short-wave stations, said he is "particularly interested in the development of radio as a means of interchange of culture."

He predicted that America shortly will produce "the finest of all international broadcasting."

Counteracts Propaganda.

The broadcast marked one of the first efforts of this country to counteract the propaganda of Germany and other European countries which heretofore have dominated international broadcasting to South America.

Under the call letters W2XAD, the program was broadcast from Washington NBC studios on a frequency of 9550 kilocycles over a beam antenna that has the effect fo increasing the transmission power six times. Within a few weeks this power will be increased to 100 kilowatts by General Electric and will have the effect of 1200 kilowatts, the most powerful short-wave transmitter in the world.

The program was transmitted to Schenectady and there rebroadcast to South America. Part of the program originated in New York City. The speeches of McNinch and Welles, although in English, were translated into Portuguese.

Rowe, Lobo Speak.

Other addresses by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union and Fernando Lobo, charge d'affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, were delivered in Portuguese.

Dr. Rowe said that "the inauguration of this Pan American channel marks another step in the forward movement for closer intellectual ties between Brazil and the United States."

Lobo said that the radio link is making distance between the two nations "negligible," "because of its possibilities of universal conveyance of human feeling."

Secretary Woodring, President of the National Forest Reservation Commission, yesterday announced that the commission had authorized the Forest Service to purchase 104,788 acres to be added to 32 National forests and purchase units at a net cost of $331,184.15. The acquisition units included George Washington, Va. and W. Va., 2,964—$10,868, and Jefferson, Va., 2,797—$8,201.

On Capitol Hill

Civil Liberties Committee Hears Details of Labor Harmony Scheme.

Charles A. MacDonald, head of a South Bend (Ind.), advertising agency, told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday of selling advertising copy to various industrial communities to "promote harmony" between labor and industry.

MacDonald said his firm prepared a series of advertisements and distributed them by contacting newspapers and chambers of commerce, who in turn obtained local sponsorship.

Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers, identified copies of a series of "harmony" advertisements the association purchased from MacDonald's firm in 1937 for distribution to newspapers.

In most cases, MacDonald said, the agency's fee was paid by newspapers in the communities where the ads were run.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, read a brochure by which the agency described the series to prospective users. It said the agency could not "guarantee to prevent labor troubles," but reported that over a period of months only one strike had started in 30 cities where the advertisements were used and that some strikes in progress were "quickly and satisfactorily" ended.

The committee was recessed until 10 a. m. Monday.

Cutting certain prices is the way to hasten economic recovery, two university professors told the Senate Committee on Unemployment.

Prof. Paul A. Douglas testified that "monopoly fixation of prices was a major cause of the present recession and the 1929 depression."

Dr. Alvin H. Hansen, also an expert on economics, said the chances of permanent recovery were lessened by "monopolistic corporate and labor policies that prevent adequate cost reduction."

Douglas lashed out at the Administration's experiments with NRA codes and farm acts. The Blue Eagle "hatched" a series of trade associations that maintained rigid prices, while the "AAA and ever normal granary" tended to extend the monopoly system to agriculture, he said.

Roosevelt Scores Bill to Repeal Publicity for Large Salaries

Taxes

L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, who sturdily supports the President on nearly every issue, said he wanted no controversy with the White House.

"Everybody knows I introduced a bill for repeal and it passed the House last year," said Doughton. "This bill also leaves out the publicity provision. It will stand that way so far as I am concerned."

Last year the House drove the Doughton repeal bill to passage, following widespread circulation of "sucker lists" compiled from names and salaries in the upper brackets sent to Congress by the Treasury every year. The Senate has never passed the bill. So the House committee provided for repeal in the new tax-revision bill. There were indications the House would back the committee, despite the President's complaint.

Bipartisan Attack.

Meanwhile, the House heard business tax provisions of the new revenue measure attacked from both sides of the aisle.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, called on Republicans to base their motion to recommit the tax bill on the "1B" section, providing tax penalties on "closely held" corporations which fail to declare large dividends. He called the penalty "unfair, unjust and discriminatory." He served notice he would fight a motion to send the bill back to committee for complete repeal of the undivided profits tax.

From the Republican side came a blast from Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York. Wadsworth criticized Democrats for continuing the principle of undivided profits taxation. He charged the new measure "taxes business for the privilege of saving," while the country is "losing ground in the economic field." The word "thrift," he declared, is unknown to the Administration vocabulary.

Radio Tax Condemned.

Proposals in a separate measure to tax radio stations in proportion to the amount of power they use, meanwhile brought a letter of condemnation from Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the Federal Communications Commission. Doughton released the letter to reporters, and indicated no hearings would be held on the radio tax bill proposed by Representative John J. Bolan (Democrat), of New York.

"There is no consistent or logical justification for basing a tax on radio broadcasting stations solely on wattage, without regard to income, type of service, geographical coverage or other pertinent considerations," McNinch said in his letter.

He said this did not mean the commission had objections to the principle of levying a tax upon, or charging a fee for, the exercise of the privilege of broadcasting. In such a case, he said, the commission believes "there should be some proper relationship between the tax base and the tax rate and the purpose for which it is imposed." He offered to make recommendations on the latter approach, which he said presented complex questions.

The Boylan bill, opposed by McNinch, would impose a tax of $1 per watt for every station authorized to use not in excess of 1,000 watts power; $2 for each station using 1,000 to 10,000 watts, and $3 for stations using in excess of 10,000 watts.

President Answers Query.

The President's statement in support of continued salary publicity was in answer to a question pointing out that the pending tax revision measure omitted the publicity requirement.

The President has said often the only practical way for stockholders to find out how much their officers were being paid was through publication of salaries. Where corporations are controlled by only a few stockholders, he said, official salaries should be published so profits of the company may be apparent. He cited the possibility of officers paying themselves large salaries so profits could be cut down, and said he knew of many cases where the public records of such companies showed no profit.

House Opposes Idea.

House sentiment recently has been strongly against salary publicity, and Doughton's repeal measure last year was swept to passage. But there was prospect that the Senate, which initiated the publicity provision and has not passed the Doughton bill, would restore the section to the new revenue measure.

In opposing proposed penalties on closely held corporations, Representative McCormack yesterday indicated he would support other features, such as continuance of the undivided profits tax principle and easing of capital gains levies. He said the proposed 16 to 20 per cent undivided profits tax on companies earning more than $25,000 was in effect a "normal tax." And he said the committee did "a good job in revising the capital gains tax."

Attacks on Savings Seen.

Representative Wadsworth said the country was now paying the penalty, through taxation, for a "super-gorgeous spending program." He said the "fallacy" underlying the undivided profits tax "lies in the fact that it constitutes an attack upon savings in business."

"When you say to a business man that he cannot save money in the form of a surplus without paying a penalty for it in the form of taxes, you reverse the normal mental operation of the average business man," said Wadsworth. "In theory at least you deny everything he has been taught. I think it is that phase of it that has done more to shock the small business man of America than any other one thing."

Wadsworth said it was "fundamental heresy" for the law to say in effect:

"You shall not save all you think is necessary for the salvation of your business and the payment of your debts, except you pay a tax for the privilege of saving."

He told members they could not catch up with the spending program by continually increasing taxes, "struggle as you may, and you might as well know it."

Brewster Fears 'Excursions' to Asia by Navy

Maverick Assails Plan for Big Fleet, Holds Defenses Neglected.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional foes of the billion-dollar naval expansion program demanded assurance yesterday that the augmented fleet would not be used for "Asiatic excursions."

Representative Brewster (Republican), Maine, member of the House Naval Committee, asserted he was unable to see the need for more battleships when the Navy had not built all those already authorized.

He declared one more battleship could be started immediately and nine built before 1942 without any further legislation. Legislation approved by the committee yesterday would authorize three additional battleships and 43 other combatant ships.

"What we want to know," Brewster added, "is whether this increase is necessary for defense or is to be used for Asiatic excursions."

Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, asserted Congress was letting the Nation's basic defenses go to pieces while "building battleships for an aggressive war."

"The truth is," Maverick said in a statement, "there exists a dangerous and alarming shortage of anti-aircraft guns to beat off enemy air raids. There is also a scandalous shortage of coast artillery to protect our coast cities against enemy naval attacks.

"The truth is that if the Army collected every antiaircraft gun in the country and concentrated them around one great city . . . there wouldn't be enough guns to properly protect that city against enemy air raids."

The House will debate the naval program next week after voting on the tax bill.

House Conferees Refuse $2,700,000 For Big TVA Dam

By the United Press.

House conferees bluntly have refused to accept a $2,700,000 item in the independent offices appropriation bill to begin construction of the Tennessee Valley Authority's $112,000,000 super-dam at Gilbertsville, Ky., until a thorough Congressional investigation of the agency has been made, it was learned last night.

The action was the first positive result of the sensational feud between the TVA's directors, which has brought many demands for an immediate inquiry into affairs of the New Deal's power-rate "yardstick program."

The ultimatum was handed the Senate conferees by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, head of the House group, during an attempt to reconcile differences between versions of the $1,412,000,000 bill.

Gay Princesses Brighten Gray Day for Capital

Captivated by U. S. Hustle, They Take Tea With Mrs. Roosevelt.

Flashing smiles as sunny as the climate of their native land through the gray mist of a March afternoon, three princesses from the Graustarkian Kingdom of Albania arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon, took tea with Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House and agreed they were captivated by the hustle and bustle of America.

The royal visitors, their highnesses Myzejen, Ruhije and Maxhide, sisters of King Zog, might have been mere girls from finishing school on vacation in the chic black coats and close-fitting hats, with tiny feathers stabbing the sky.

They were greeted, however, by an army of photographers, whose flash bulbs fired a salute, and they came very near to witnessing a free-for-all between cameramen and several private police at the Union Station who tried to keep the admiring and curious public from seeing just how princesses look when they get off an express train on an unofficial visit far from home.

Melee Threatens.

His excellency Faik Konitza, the Albanian Minister, accompanied the princesses from New York. They were the last to leave the pullman at the depot and they stepped down the steps to find a representative of the State Department and a crowd waiting.

Then the royal visitors walked through the train shed, chatting gayly together in Albanian above the roar.

Outside the depot flash bulbs glittered again and then the station police tried to interfere. For a moment there was a threatened melee when one cameraman poised his camera to hit a policeman.

But in a second it was over. The princesses were tucked in a limosine and sped to the Mayflower Hotel.

The Princesses not only met the First Lady but they met the President himself. Mr. Roosevelt took time off from his official duties to have tea with them in the Green Room. The Albanian Minister was present and the conversation was in French.

When Myzejen, Ruhije and Maxhide arrived at the Executive Mansion they were attired in identical black fur coats and wore high-heeled black pumps. On the pert black hats of two of them were black and gold bows. One Princess wore a toque.

America, with its steel and its girders and its teeming millions, is a thrilling contrast to their tiny kingdom, sloping from the mountains to the lazy blue Adriatic, the princesses agreed, through an interpreter, after they had rested.

"Their highnesses are enchanted with your United States," a spokesman said.

"They intend to visit your Yellowstone National Park, if it is possible, and compare its scenery with the mountains of Albania. They are delighted with America and Americans."

Princess Myzeyen, who is 29; Princess Ruhije, 27, and Princess Maxhide, 26, have no intention of husband-hunting in the United States. How the story originated they do not know but the idea, they agreed yesterday, was silly. It may have arisen from the fact that their royal brother, King Zog, soon will make Countess Geraldine Apponyi, of Hungary, beautiful daughter of the former Gladys Virginia Stewart, of New York City, his queen.

Feel Like Butterflies.

Somehow, the princesses said, they feel like butterflies from an ancient kingdom on a steel shawl. That is because America is so highly mechanized and populous, with its skyscrapers and vast buildings, in contrast to little Tirana, their national capital, with a population of 30,000.

What phase of American life so far has impressed the princesses most?

"They cannot say yet," a spokesman said. "They have not been here long enough. Perhaps when they return to Washington from Boston next week they will know."

The princesses are interested in the heart of American life, it was pointed out. Princess Maxhide is president of the Albanian Girl Guides and curious about Girl Scouts here.

With the thrill of their visit to the White House still fresh in their minds, the Princesses left last night for New York. From New York they will go to Boston and then they will return to Washington for a stay of several days.

$618,535,000 Asked for 1938 By British Navy

$1,800,000,000 Is Defense Total; Warships May Add $250,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 4.—The British navy asked today for a minimum of $618,535,000, swelling Britain's share of the world rearmament race for 1938 to more than $1,800,000,000.

The officially-estimated grand total for navy, air force, army, and miscellaneous services was set at £351,750,000 ($1,758,750,000) but when the final request went to Parliament today the year's price for defending the empire's globe-girdling shores added up to £361,985,000 ($1,809,925,000.)

Even using the official figure the British taxpayer discovered that the defense cost to every one of Britain's 46,000,000 people will be more than $35.

New Building Additional.

The minimum figure is an increase in naval costs of $93,210,000 over last year and in total armament cost of $464,925,000.

Today's huge naval estimates, announced to commons of Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty, did not include the bill for the building of two battleships, seven cruisers, one aircraft carrier and other ships to be started this year.

Terms to Rome Stated.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

London, March 4.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tonight turned over to Lord Perth, British ambassador to Rome, the terms for Britain's new "realistic" dealings with Premier Mussolini in an effort to bring about lasting Anglo-Italian friendship.

Lord Perth, who will return to Rome tomorrow, consulted with King George VI before receiving his final instructions from Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

The instructions were understood to include:

1. Recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, principal demand of Mussolini as the basis for a new accord.

2. Recognition of British sovereignty over the headwaters of Lake Tana adjoining the Nile.

3. Reduction of Italy's military garrisons in Libya.

4. A declaration recognizing Italy's rights as a major Mediterranean power.

5. A reaffirmation of the principles of the ill-fated Italo-British "gentlemen's agreement" of Mediterranean friendship.

6. Withdrawal of Italian intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Envoy Kennedy Sees Chamberlain Without Comment

London, March 4 (AP).—Joseph B. Kennedy went for a ride today on a rented horse, "swapped handshakes" with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and wisecracked with correspondents.

He had nothing to say about his visit to Downing street.

Cocking his feet on his desk, he talked about the New Deal and the stock market, but parried questions about international affairs by quipping: "You can't expect me to develop into a statesman overnight."

Czech Borders 'Untouchable,' Premier Says

Republic Will Confer With Reich on Equal Basis, He Tells Deputies.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 4. Premier Milan Hodza told a madly cheering Chamber of Deputies today that Czechoslovakia's borders are "absolutely untouchable."

This was the answer of the war-created republic to issues raised by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's coup in Austria and German Field Marshal Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's promise of protection for "ten millions of Germans just across our borders."

Hodza said Czechoslovakia would discuss problems with Germany on a "basis of absolute equality" but, to the wild cheers of the chamber, he swore she would defend her sovereignty and independence to her last breath.

Germany Replies.

Berlin, March 4 (AP).—Nazi Germany's claims to the right of protecting her "brethren across the border" were reasserted tonight by the Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz in reaction to the Prague speech of Premier Milan Hodza, of Czechoslovakia.

The foreign office mouthpiece argued that the founders of the Czechoslovakian state should undertake that all nationalities within her borders be treated on a basis of equality so none should suffer the oppression against which the Czechs complained under the Hapsburg regime.

It advanced the argument that the inhabitants of German regions in Czechoslovakia could not feel at home under Czech rule which denied them self-administration.

Hirota Suggests Nations Abolish Capital Ships

Japan Would 'Welcome' Arms Reduction Talks, Foreign Minister Says.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 4.—Foreign Minister Hirota urged world naval reduction by abolition of all capital warships today in a renewed bid for friendship with the United States.

"As long as we fully understand each other," Hirota told a parliamentary budget committee, "I am confident there will be no trouble between Japan and the United States."

The foreign minister, who long has sought a friendship accord with the United States, told the committee "we are doing our best to promote friendship through an exchange of messages with Secretary Hull."

Would "Welcome" Talks.

He said Japan "would welcome the opportunity to discuss the question of naval reduction with the powers. If such opportunity appears, the Japanese government will propose the total abolition of capital ships."

(Such ships were defined by the 1921-22 naval treaties as those, other than aircraft carriers, of more than 10,000 tons with guns larger than 8-inch.)

Hirota's statement came in the midst of a bitter quarrel between parliamentary leaders and the government that raised tension in Tokyo almost to the breaking point.

General Apologizes.

The war minister, Gen. Gen Sugiyama, was forced to apologize to a committee of the House of Representatives for the conduct of an army officer.

Lieut. Col. Masaki Sato, a member of the bureau of military affairs, appeared before the committee studying the general mobilization law which political party leaders have branded as "dictatorial" and "fascistic."

When he began a harangue on patriotism, committee members questioned his right to appear. Sato shouted "Shut up!" and shouldered his way out of the room.

Unwed Sultan Evades Queries On U.S. Women

Royal Visitor Gets 21-Gun Salutes at Navy Yard and Fort Myer.

Wearing warm long-sleeved underwear to protect his royal body from cold Potomac winds, and swinging a slender English cane as he dashed about the city, the diminutive, dark-skinned Sultan of Muscat and Oman yesterday put in his second full day as the ruling guest of honor in the Nation's Capital.

At Fort Myer and the Washington Navy Yard he received the 21-gun salutes held in reserve for active sovereigns. At the Navy Yard he spent a busy sightseeing hour and at the fort he watched a colorful exhibition drill of Cavalry and Artillery troops.

Today he will journey to Mount Vernon aboard the Navy's yacht Sequoia and the official part of his trip to this country will be over. He will continue his travels as plain Mr. Said.

Courteous to Press.

His Highness started yesterday with his first American press conference, receiving newspapermen, and women, in his suite at the Willard Hotel immediately after his two Arabian companions had wheeled out a breakfast tray liberally sprinkled with banana peelings.

With the cuffs of Occidental trousers barely visible beneath the brown and white robes native to his country, the 27-year-old Sultan sat calmly on a large plush sofa and answered questions—or pondered them and decided them too weighty or "difficult."

After a longer pause than usual, he avoided expressing his thoughts on the beauty of American women by declaring with a bright smile: "That is a very difficult question to answer."

Arabic Diplomacy.

His Arabic diplomacy was further demonstrated when asked which part of America he likes best—based on his trip across the continent from San Francisco. "I think all parts I have seen are beautiful," the potentate replied, after his usual hesitation.

He also refused to be caught up on the matter of his favorite movie star. He broke over, however, when it came to radio broadcasts.

"I think your news I like best," he declared.

There are no movies in his country and comparatively few radios, he said. By means of radio's short waves many good programs are available to his countrymen who have sets, however.

"We get good programs in our own language—Arabic—from Cairo and also from Italy," he said.

Likes Air Travel.

The Sultan has "tried air travel a little" and likes it but does not contemplate any flights while he is in America.

As for American sports, he likes tennis, which he "used to play." Asked why he had discontinued the sport at his early age, his highness sank into placid thought for a moment and then said gravely:

"I don't think I could answer that."

Concerning the commerce of his country, the ruler, who is fourteenth in his line, speaks with more animation. The exports of Muscat and Oman go first to India and then the rest of the world, he said. They consist mostly of dates and frankincense. The latter-named product, he said, is enjoying a renewed popularity in the Orient.

"I wish I had more time to tell you of my country," the Sultan declared when State Department aides showed up for the visit to the Navy Yard. "But you see I have a very full schedule," he added.

Dagger Is Magnificent.

Questioned about the beautiful silver hilt of the dagger which he wears at his waist, the Sultan beamed his pleasure.

"It is done in my country," he declared. "You see we cannot have gold. We cannot wear either gold or silk."

Both are tabooed by the Islam religion of the sultanate. The brown toga worn over the fine white cotton robe is of closely-woven wool. The only decoration to this costume is thread-of-gold stitching sparingly used. Color is added by the Oriental turban and a touch of magnificence is supplied by the elaborate dagger hilt.

No Harem—Unmarried.

The two companions of the Sultan are dressed exactly like him, except they are so much taller that more of their Occidental trousers show beneath their brown togas and they both wear horn-rimmed spectacles. The Sultan, who is but 5 feet 2 inches tall and is on the slightly rotund side of the scales, wears a very small mustache.

The ancestors of his highness once drove the mighty Portuguese from their rich possession of Zanzibar, but the British pushed these ancestors out in 1856 and Muscat has been declining as a power ever since. The actual supervisor of the country is India, where the Sultan spends part of the time. The most of his time, however, he lives in his home in Muscat, he declared at the press conference.

Although no interviewer asked the Sultan concerning his bachelor status—in view of the harem tendencies in his part of the world—the State Department cleared the matter officially by declaring: "He is unmarried."

Social Credit Plan Is Ruled Illegal By Canada Court

Ottawa, March 4 (Canadian Press).—Canada's Supreme Court today blasted the social credit plan of Premier William Aberhart of Alberta Province.

The court not only ruled unconstitutional three Alberta bills that were the framework but Chief Justice Lyman Duff also ruled against the Alberta social credit act, cornerstone of the structure.

Social credit, on which the Aberhart government was elected in 1935, envisioned "credit dividends" of $25 a month for all adult citizens of Alberta, increased consumers' purchasing power, elimination of profiteering, control on price spreads of goods dealt in within the province, increased internal credit, lower individual indebtedness and no hasty foreclosures.

Hope Given Up For Freedom Of Niemoeller

Pastor, Foe of Nazis, Sent to Concentration Camp Despite Court Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 4.—Pastor Martin Niemoeller, rallying point of Protestant opposition to Nazi efforts to dominate the church, has been sent to a concentration camp by the German secret police despite his being set free by a court.

His wife collapsed when she was told today that her husband had been sent to the Sachsenhausen, Saxony, camp. His six children and friends despaired of ever seeing him free again when the full significance of his detention at Sachsenhausen dawned on them.

In that camp of about 3,400 "custodied" men are said to be nearly 1,000 members of the International Bible Students Association and others who have run afoul of the Nazi regime for reasons of conscience.

Gestapo Has Full Authority.

The Gestapo, the secret police, is claimed on good authority to be determined none of these "offenders against the state" would ever be released again unless they retract.

Niemoeller's past gives little hope that he is likely to come around to the point of view of the Gestapo which has sole discretion as to how long he is to be held in "protective custody."

Even the minister of justice, Franz Guertmer, was reported reliably to have been unable to save Niemoeller from the Gestapo. He was said to have fought against handing the pastor over to the secret police.

Rearrested Immediately.

Niemoeller, after seven months in prison, was sentenced Wednesday to seven months in jail and fined $600 for attacking leaders of the state and using the pulpit improperly.

The fine was paid at once and the court ruled Niemoeller had served the sentence while awaiting trial.

But as he left the courtroom, the secret police immediately rearrested him. Except for a brief interview with his attorney, no word had been heard of him until today.

Life in a concentration camp, where the commandant has the power to have prisoners flogged at his discretion, is no joke even by Nazi standards.

"God's Sense of Humor."

New arrivals—such as Niemoeller—usually do the menial work of the camp. Only later as others are sent to the camp are they gradually relieved of these duties—provided they have won the confidence of their superior officers.

Much of the time is devoted to semi-military and setting up exercises. During the winter months the inmates learn Nazi songs which they must sing at command.

Reportedly, only one visit a month is permitted to an inmate's family. All incoming and outgoing mail is censored.

Two letters written by Niemoeller from jail to his friends have been made available to the Associated Press.

In one he wrote:

"I believe my incarceration is an instance of God's holy sense of humor.

"Here they laugh scornfully 'at last we have got him' and arrest 800 more, but what is the result? Full churches with praying congregations."

100 Loyalists Die In Rebel Air Raid

London, March 4 (U.P.).—The loyalist radio at Madrid announced tonight that 100 persons were killed in a rebel air raid on Alcaniz, 45 miles from the Mediterranean in the northeast corner of the Teruel front.

Letter Names Ex-Envoys in Anti-Red Plot

Message in Secret Ink, Produced at Moscow Trial, Involves 2.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 4.—A letter in secret chemical ink brought the names of two recalled Soviet Ambassadors today into the great web of conspiracies confessed by the 21 defendants in Moscow's greatest treason trial.

Plotters already executed were linked with D. V. Bogomoloff, former envoy to China, who was recalled from Nanking last September, and Dr. Constantine Youreneff, who was called home from Berlin and since has been rumored under arrest.

The two ambassadors were named by Christian Rakovsky, one of the defendants and himself once the Soviet's ambassador to France.

The mysterious letter, addressed to Youreneff and signed by Gregory Piatakoff, a former vice commissar of heavy industry who was executed as a conspirator, said a certain government would approach Rakovsky. It also implicated Bogomoloff.

Rakovsky said he already had met an important public figure in Japan and they had agreed "our aims and those of a certain government coincide."

Funds For Trotsky.

By the United Press.

Moscow, March 4.—Nearly $1,000,000 filched from Soviet government funds has been smuggled into the hands of Leon Trotsky, exiled warlord, to finance his intrigues for a new Russian revolution and murder plots against Josef V. Stalin and other Kremlin leaders, it was admitted tonight in the treason trial of 21 Bolsheviks.

Arcady Rosengoltz, former commissar of foreign trade and a veteran revolutionary among those on trial for their lives, said that since 1931 Trotsky had been paid $985,000—the money diverted from foreign trade funds.

Disclosures Confirmed.

Nicolai Krestinsky, former Soviet Ambassador to Germany who was a lone holdout against the treason charges during the first day of the trial but finally confessed to all the charges against him, confirmed Rosengoltz's disclosures.

Trotsky, he said, was enraged because the conspirators who went to death in the Soviet's previous "show trials" made full confessions of their guilt.

From the sanctuary of his exile, Krestinsky said, the archplotter sent word that any others falling into the trap of Stalin's purge must "admit nothing and plead not guilty."

Assassin Plot Claimed.

It was testified that the swift execution last June of Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky, ambitious "Russian Napoleon," thwarted an international plot for the mass murders of Stalin and his Kremlin coterie.

The bloody putsch was only a few days off, Rosengoltz said, when Tukhachevsky and seven other Red army generals were snared by the secret police.

Foreign Traders Involved.

Rosengoltz described in detail how he manipulated the commissariat of foreign trade to finance Trotsky's intrigues for the last three years.

The transfers of the money to Trotsky were arranged, he said, through foreign trading corporations doing business with the Soviet regime.

On Trotsky's instructions, he explained, he began wrecking the Soviet's foreign trade affairs by granting various advantages to Germany, Japan and other powers.

Plot to Kill Guard, Loot Warehouse Betrayed by Boy

Guns

Gun Traced to Store.

The first "break" in the sporting goods store robbery came about 9:30 p. m. Thursday with the arrest of four youths who were attempting to gain entry to the Earle Theater. The four were captured by Headquarters Detective Jack Baker, assigned to the theater to watch for pickpockets.

Only one of the quartet was held, however, inasmuch as Baker found him to be carrying a revolver in a shoulder holster. Detective Shippman traced the weapon to sporting goods store loot.

The youth named two National Guardsmen, as the youths who robbed the store, police said.

Early yesterday the youths were arrested. Eleven guns were seized at the home of one, ten at the other's.

In the basement of one of the homes, according to the detectives, the crime "fraternity" held its secret meetings, hatched its plots and named their society the "apartment gang," as a tribute to their success in breaking into apartments in the northeast area.

Roosevelt Lets Two TVA Aides Publish Reply

detailed recommendation on power-pooling policy, which report proposed evasions and violations of the TVA act," and for making such a report available to the utilities "during negotiations."

Norris, meanwhile, deferred until Monday a motion he planned which would wrest the King-Bridges resolution for a Congressional investigation of TVA from the hands of the Senate Commerce Committee. Norris seeks to have the resolution transferred to the Senate Agriculture Committee, where all TVA legislation has originated. He appeared confident of success yesterday in this attempt.

He charged Bridges had introduced the resolution "with stealth," saying:

"I think it was a premeditated move. Senator Bridges, the Record shows, announced merely that, with Senator King, he offered a joint resolution and asked for its reference to the Commerce Committee.

Fears Inquiry by Foes.

"He knew very well that the slightest intimation that the resolution concerned a TVA investigation would have brought instant objections from a number of us. It was unfairly done, and the charges made by him and Senator King are maliciously and unfairly phrased.

"I want as sweeping an investigation of the TVA as can be made, because I have no fear of the result. But I do not want TVA investigated by its enemies any more than by its friends. The Federal Trade Commission is best equipped to make an impartial study."

President Roosevelt had refrained for nearly two years from participating in the bitter war among the TVA directors, wherein Chairman Morgan, an advocate of conciliatory policies with the utilities, was consistently outvoted by Lilienthal and Dr. Morgan, who hold fast to the "yardstick" purpose of the TVA act.

Chairman Morgan himself brought the issue to a head Wednesday when he denounced his co-directors in a lengthy statement asking a Congressional investigation. He declared the fight "is no mere family quarrel," but was over "honesty, decency, openness and fairness in government."

Charges Answered.

Yesterday's statement, although dated January 18, answered Chairman Morgan's charges almost point by point. It suggested that the chairman resign if he could not cooperate, stating:

"There can be no possible objection to a public official retiring to private life and standing up as a private citizen to contest and seek to upset a policy with which he has disagreed as a public officer.

"If, however, he remains as an executive officer of an agency with the decisions on which he is out of sympathy, an obligation rests upon him not to use his vantage point as an executive to obstuct the carrying out of determined policies."

'Maintained Silence.'

The statement's high lights included these remarks:

"Much that has been accomplished since the spring of 1936 has been in spite of Mr. Morgan's continued efforts to obstruct board decisions with which he disagreed . . . (Since May, 1935) with one exception, we have maintained silence in the face of this extreme provocation, in the hope that tolerance would lead ultimately to unity and loyalty. In this hope we have been disappointed and rebuffed.

"Arthur E. Morgan has increased both the scope and intensity of his attack upon majority action until, in recent months, this opposition and obstruction have occupied virtually his entire time, even to the exclusion of his attendance upon board meetings.

". . . To promote unity and avoid dissension, we have acquiesced and agreed to some of Arthur E. Morgan's proposals which both of us have thought were impractical, immature and confused. . . .

Price Is "Too High."

"But there should be no misunderstanding on this score: so long as we are members of this board, we will never permit any private agency to secure a monopoly over the public power resources of this river.

"This we have resisted against plausible and high-sounding schemes and efforts both from within and without this board. We propose to continue to do so. To surrender this principle and thereby violate the law and our oath of office is too high a price to pay for internal harmony."

Meanwhile, in Nashville, Tenn., according to an Associated Press dispatch, Public Utilities Commissioner Leon Jouralmon estimated that seven large Tennessee power companies had spent more than $600,000 fighting the Tennessee Valley Authority in the last three years.

Senator Berry Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

Increased opposition in his campaign for re-election yesterday confronted Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, whose marble properties brought the battle within the Tennessee Valley Authority into the open.

Representative J. Ridley Mitchell announced his candidacy, and Representative Sam D. McReynolds said he had been authorized to announce that Maj. Phil Whitaker, of Chattanooga, also would enter the race. There is a possibility McReynolds also will run.

Berry and a group of colleagues sued for damages for what they contended were valuable marble properties flooded by the waters behind Norris Dam, a major TVA project. Chairman Arthur E. Morgan denounced the claim as an attempt to exploit the Government, and criticized Harcourt A. Morgan, vice chairman, and David E. Lilienthal, director of the authority, for entering into a "friendly agreement" with Berry to determine the marble's value.

Parking Meter Proposal Snags District Budget

asking unanimous consent for adjournment until Monday.

A two-thirds majority of the Senate will be necessary to pass the parking meter authorization. For the last three years a similar amendment to the District supply bill has been blocked on points of order, but the proposal has never been put to a vote.

Only three major changes were made in the bill as reported by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

One of these, suggested by the District Medical Society, substitutes nurses for six additional resident physicians at Gallinger Hospital. The amendment was offered by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, and indorsed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York.

Added Nurses Urged.

Copeland said it would permit the appointment of about 15 additional nurses. The New York Senator, himself a physician, said that he concurred with the District Medical Society in the opinion that additional nurses are more important than doctors at the hospital.

The only amendment which increases the amount of the supply bill was an additional $10,000 for custodial employes of the public schools. Copeland, who offered it, estimated that it will raise the pay of 300 employes between $2 and $3 a month.

Relief Quota Restored.

The third amendment restored to $75 a month the maximum allowable by the Public Assistance Division to any one family as home care for dependent children.

Copeland urged that the amount be raised to $100, which is now the maximum allowance, but Thomas objected. The New York Senator said he will make another effort on Monday to restore the $100, which was cut to $75 by the House.

"This matter is dear to my heart," Copeland said. "This form of aid is important because it enables a mother to keep her home and family intact."

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, raised questions about the appropriations for purchase of a site for a National Guard Armory and to start construction of a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge but offered no objections after the items were explained by Thomas.

King Indorses Fund.

Senator King interposed an indorsement of the armory appropriation of $150,000.

"There is a universal demand for this project," he said. "The District National Guard is now quartered in a battered old hotel, and the District Commissioners and the National Guard are anxious to have new quarters."

The proposed site is on the end of East Capitol street. There is no appropriation for the building.

Senator Thomas explained that the Pensylvania Avenue Bridge project had been the subject of controversy for several years.

Bridge Held Unsafe.

"The bridge is in a very bad condition," he said, 'and I don't feel like taking the responsibility for anything that may happen to it. The bridge is unsafe and has been condemned."

The Senate accepted without objection a committee amendment for a bridge over Rock Creek Parkway along Massachusetts avenue.

Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the District Medical Society, sent identical letters to members of the Senate Appropriations Committee earlier in the day urging the change in the Gallinger appropriation.

The Medical Society, he said, "is willing and eager to provide its most skilled service to Gallinger Hospital in whatever degree those services are needed free of charge."

"The great problem (at Gallinger) is one of lack of physical facilities," the letter added, "which repeatedly has been pointed out, most recently in the survey and report of the United States Public Health Service, and, above all, the critical shortage in the staff of nurses."

Appointment Proposal Evokes Roosevelt Irony

By the Associated Press.

Proposal by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, to require Senate confirmation of appointments of all independent agency officials making more than $5,000 a year drew satirical comment from President Roosevelt yesterday. The President said at his press conference that in discussing the proposal with friends at a White House dinner recently he had suggested that those who wanted to do a good job of confirmation should confirm appointments of everybody down to scrub women and messengers.

Ohio Preacher Gave Her Up After Long Courtship to 'Hob-Nob With Success,' Woman Declares; Defense Says Pastor Is 'Crucified.'

By the Associated Press.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 4.—A jury of 12 middle-aged men awarded Cora Lillian Burnham, divorcee, $10,000 late today for loss of the affections of the Rev. Harold C. Zeis, Episcopal rector.

In final arguments, Miss Burnham, slim, 43-year-old New York secretary, one time movie organist, was alternately described as an "assassin," and "the forgotten woman."

John D. Gardner, attorney for the preacher, described her $100,000 suit as "an assassination, a crucifixion of a man who has devoted his life to doing good."

Harley S. Cook, attorney for Miss Burnham, described the divorcee as the "forgotten woman," who "gave the best years of her life to this scoundrel."

Miss Burnham had left for New York before the jury reached its verdict. The minister did not appear in court for the verdict, but remained at home with his wife, the former Mrs. Emma Sharpe, Steubenville bank director, whom he married in 1936, two months after his courtship with Miss Burnham ended.

Miss Burnham said the minister courted her eight years, sent her endearing love letters, bought her numerous presents and helped educate her daughter. Then, she declared, he met her in a New York hotel in November, 1935, and told her:

"I've got to be free. I'm going to marry Emma Sharpe. I'm going to hob-nob with success."

Mrs. Sharpe was the wealthy widow of an Ohio Valley steel manufacturer.

Kennedy Pushed For Governorship

Philadelphia, March 4 (AP).—Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy was out of the running today for the United States Senate, but that statement merely served to strengthen reports he would jump into the Democratic field for Governor with the support of John L. "I am definitely not a candidate for the United States Senate."

provements. There are a lot more I would like to have seen. But we are improving and getting better all the time and on the whole going forward.

"There are times when it appears that we can't see our way out. That's the situation in which I find myself right now. But I hope, and I have the supreme belief that there is a brighter day ahead."

"What still needs to be done most of all?" he was asked.

"Ah, that's plain. We simply must solve the unemployment problem. And there is only one solution: We must limit the hours of labor whether we like it or not.

"It's going to be a hard fight, but once we have won the victory I firmly believe that we will look back and admit that it was worth the effort."

Served Since 1903.

He said that everyone was agreed that unemployment is largely the result of technological inventions. But at the same time, he said, it is recognized that these conventions can't be discarded.

"It is equally true, however," Norris said, "that we can accomplish the same number of things now in much less time than in the past. Our great problem is to see that our vast number of unemployed citizens are made consumers instead of permitting them to become a burden on our country as at present."

There are five men with longer records in the Senate than Norris—Borah, of Idaho, who began in 1907; Smith, of South Carolina, 1909; Ashurst, of Arizona, 1912; Pittman, of Nevada, and Sheppard, of Texas, January 29, 1913. Norris took the oath on March 4, 1913.

Norris, however, is the dean of Capitol Hill, having served ten years in the House before going to the Senate. He started his House service in 1903, four years before Representative Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, came along.

Called Father of TVA.

Unlike some other insurgents, Norris has many pieces of legislation and many reforms to his credit. He sponsored the constitutional amendment that did away with "lame ducks" in Congress, he fought Henry Ford's bid for Muscle Shoals and today is called the father of TVA.

One of his greatest experiments and reforms is the Nebraska unicameral, or one-house Legislature. It is made up of 43 State legislators instead of the 100 representatives and 33 senators under the old two-house system. They are elected on a nonpartisan basis.

Senator Norris and Mrs. Norris, shying from Washington's social whirl, spend their evenings quietly in their apartment in the Methodist Building. The Senator is a voracious reader and his favorite character is Rostand's big-nosed hero, Cyrano de Bergerac.

venerable Senator George W. Norris, (Independent), of Nebraska.

"I am only sorry," Norris said, "that we are not being asked to confirm him as a justice of the Supreme Court." He added that he would be glad to see Jackson in the White House, and was joined in his paean of praise by Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York.

Voting against confirmation were Austin and King and Senators Frederick Hale (Republican), Maine, and Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon.

Norris offered a stanch defense for the youthful New Deal liberal and, attacking Austin and Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, said their "philosophy is, 'If we have a crook and he's our crook, let's put him in office, and if he's honest and a political opponent, let's keep him out.'"

"Political Peg" Charged.

Opposition to Jackson stemmed from his speeches which the dissenters contended reflected disagreement with the constitutional form of government. To this Berkley replied that Bridges injected Jackson's speeches into the debate "as an attempt to drive a peg upon which to hang a political hat."

Norris praised Jackson's courage, ability and honesty, and said he regretted that as Solicitor General the appointee would not have a free hand to influence Department of Justice policy, particularly in regard to monopolies. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, concurred.

Austin contended Jackson was an enemy of constitutional government and an advocate of "Utopianism." He quoted Jackson as saying:

"I am convinced that the checks of democracy depend upon the reasonableness and self-restraint of popular majorities, rather than in the decisions of the courts."

Every country that swings away from a system of checks and balances finds itself with power concentrated in a single agency, and defends its action on the grounds of democracy, Austin said. He assailed such tendencies as detrimental to the best interests of government and tending to establish dictatorship.

"I am concerned," Austin said, "when a man holding such a philosophy is put into such a position, for he wil lhave charge of arguing the questions that are brought before the Supreme Court to be judged for constitutionality.

"The price of the New Deal program is the Republic, if the Nation accepts the argument of this man that the court has failed to recognize modern trends, as reflected at the polls."

Bloc Fails Austin.

Officials of the Department of Justice expressed surprise yesterday that the Republican bloc did not back Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, who had made a New Deal issue of the Jackson nomination, rather than a personal attack. They added, however, that "we are glad it's all over."

Berle Confirmed.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of A. A. Berle, jr., of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of State, succeeding Hugh R. Wilson.

mated 32 persons to their deaths along the river stretch from San Bernardino to Anaheim. There were 23 known dead in Atwood and Anaheim alone.

San Bernardino County, largest in the United States, was entirely cut off, with every road in the area washed out, bridges ripped away and telephone poles snapped off. Railroad traffic throughout southern California was suspended after the floods smashed bridges and trestles and washed out track beds on the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe lines.

Red Cross and emergency relief agencies set up stations to distribute food and medical supplies. Gas and power lines were cut in San Bernardino, throwing the city into darkness, and stores were placed under regulations for rationing food.

At least 30 towns throughout the area were without light or power. The huge cables carrying power from Boulder Dam, 300 miles east of here, were shapped in a half dozen places, water supply tubes were ripped up and bridges carried away by torrents.

The rainstorm lasted for 96 hours, piling up 11 inches of water in the Los Angeles area.

Rescue crews followed the receding water, recovering bodies embedded in mud banks.

Thousands of acres of farming land and citrus orchards were destroyed. The $100,000,000 citrus crop suffered considerable damage, although no accurate estimate was available.

'Jalopy' Parade Today to Open Used-Car Week

Washington's "parade of the jalopies," scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m. today from Washington Circle, will include more than 200 vehicles, it was announced yesterday by the civic committee.

The procession will be led by motorcycle police, followed by Maj. Ernest Brown and George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, and officials of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Three ancient used cars will be towed by police crane cars, while 38 more are to be dragged behind wreckers furnished by dealers.

Contrasting with these unsafe machines, 175 modern used cars will be included in the parade. Music will be furnished by the Police Boys Club band and the Holy Comforter Band, riding in buses.

The route of the motorcade follows Pennsylvania avenue east to Fourth street, Constitution avenue east to Third street, Third street north to New York avenue and New York avenue east to West Virginia avenue.

The automotive relics will be consigned to a huge bonfire on a lot near New York avenue and West Virginia avenues Monday night. Fire Marshal Calvin J. Lauber will supervise the lighting of the pyre at 8 p. m.

The purpose of the parade, which opens "National Use Car Exchange Week" in the District, is to rid the roads of unsafe automobiles and stimulate purchase of used cars in good condition.

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation urging co-operation of citizens in making the week a success.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As mortals give up the delusion that there is more than one Mind, more than one God, man in God's likeness will appear and this eternal man will include in that likeness no material element."

'Go to Church Sunday' Move To Be Marked Here Tomorrow

100 Protestant Institutions to Join in Observance; Everyone Needs Renewal of Spiritual and Moral Energies, Says Rev. Mr. Lyons.

Interested in stimulating church attendance during the Lenten season, more than 100 Washington Protestant churches will join in the observance of "Go to Church Sunday" tomorrow.

The observance is a new one, planned by the Washinton Federation of Churches in the hope that "both members and nonmembers will renew their interest in such a beneficent institution as the church."

"Most of us recognize the exhaustion of our energies not only physically but spiritually and morally," declared the Rev. W. K. Lyons, chairman of the federation's committee on public meetings. "We need renewal. The church helps us there."

Discussing further significance of the day, Mr. Lyons said:

"The inspiration of the ages is in it, and through the touch of its spirit upon us, our minds and hearts become responsive to the influences which make for righteousness, benevolence, and learning among men. We ought to go to church to share in the rebuilding of life wherever it is broken down.

"The fundamental instinct of all strong natures is that something may exist which is a thousand times more important than the question as to whether we feel well or ill. It is a pity to let petty personal concepts interfere with life's larger issues. Christ set forth a program for a new social order.

"We should be building it. He offered a remedy for many a broken and defeated condition. We ought to be making application of what he said. Hunger, illness, ignorance are all about us. We ought to share, we should help, and the church provides a means toward that end.

"It is the privilege of the average person of our day to be identified with a supreme institution which renders a vast service of mercy and help to human life."

THE AMERICAN OPEN PARISH OF WASHINGTON

A Period of Training

By the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman,
Bishop of Washington.

As Lent again approaches, I pray that we all may have a full realization of its true significance. It is not enough that there should be an increase of weekday services and of lectures on religious subjects. These are commendable and valuable, but in themselves they do not constitute the end and object of Lenten observance. Lent should be to the Christian a period of training in the life of the spirit. To aid in the accomplishment of this ideal it is wise and helpful to withdraw, as far as may be, from the ordinary round of activities and pleasures that make up our daily lives. The stress and hurry of life too often leave no place for the cultivation of the deep things of the spirit of man's relation to God. By decreasing the swift pace of our ordinary life we shall find it possible to cultivate that state of calm reflection which makes it possible for us to recover the real values of life.

BISHOP FREEMAN.

Lent should be for each one of us a season of discipline. A first step in this discipline may well be a measure of self-denial. To dispense with some of the things that we have come to cherish, and to substitute for them things of more worth is a valuable spiritual exercise. By regulating our lives we shall secure opportunity for attendance upon worship, for communion with God in Prayer and Sacrament for reading the words of wise counselors in the realm of religion and for the various exercises that keep our lives constantly directed toward their true end which is close and loving fellowship with our Lord and Saviour.

Dr. Russell Clinchy to Preach On 'The Battle in Man's Spirit'

Mount Pleasant Congregational Pastor Plans First of Series of Lenten Sermons on 'Modern Meanings for the Old Faith.'

"The Battle in Man's Spirit" will be the subject of the first sermon in the Lenten series, "Modern Meanings for the Old Faith," by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The musical service at 8 p. m. will contain selections from four German classicists—Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Weber.

"The Torah (Bible) at Random" will be presented by Dr. M. Steinberg, specialist in the Hebrew language, of the Smithsonian Institution, at the 10 o'clock session of the adult discussion group.

The Forum, the Discussion Group and the Cleveland Park young people will meet at 6 o'clock for the fellowship hour. Miss Jean Adele Dieffenbach will conduct the devotional period and the Rev. George A. Ackerly will open the Lenten discussions with the topic: "The Meaning of Lent for Young People Today."

First Congregational. Because of the interest shown in his last Sunday's sermon on the Oxford Movement, the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, minister, has decided to inaugurate a series of sermons on the Oxford group. Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock he will preach on "The Four Absolutes of the Oxford Movement: Honesty, Purity, Unselfishness and Love."

Tomorrow evening at 7:45 the drama-picture, "Shavings," will be shown. "Shavings" is a Cape Cod story, by Joseph Lincoln, of unselfishness and loyalty. Other features of this service are the gospel hymn singing from the screen and two a cappella anthems by the 60-voice vested choir.

Jesuit Priest Will Speak On 'The Peace of Christ'

"The Peace of Christ" will be the general subject of a series of Sunday morning sermons to be preached by the Rev. John J. O'Connor, S. J., in St. Aloysius' Catholic Church during Lent. Subject of the first sermon, to be given at 9 a. m. mass tomorrow, will be "National Peace."

Father O'Connor is also inaugurating a week from tomorrow night a weekly Sunday evening series of sermons on "God's Way to God."

BRING IN YOUR OLD CAR
DRIVE OUT A BETTER CAR
EASY TERMS

This Saturday morning begins a nation-wide event which this country has never seen before. Thousands of used cars—many of them modern cars with the advanced features the industry has developed in the last few years—go on sale at prices far below those of several months ago. Never has there been a national, co-operative movement like this to make better, more modern transportation available to so many people!

This National Used Car Exchange Week comes at just the right time for used car buyers. The season—the prices and the values are all in your favor. This is the week to bring in your old car and drive out a better car.

A great many 1937, '36 and '35 cars are included in this nation-wide sale. Cars have improved greatly in the last few years. If yours is older, you'll find it a real thrill to drive a car with modern style—bigger, roomier body—luggage space—safety brakes—bigger tires—smoother, more powerful engine—better gas mileage. Many of the dealers are offering their best cars with the finest kind of guarantees. If you are driving an old, unreliable car—one that nags you with repair bills and threatens your safety every time you take it out—this is your great chance to own a safer, more modern car.

Your present car may cover the down-payment, and you can pay the balance on easy terms. If you have no car to trade you can still take advantage of the low down-payments and easy terms during this sale. Go early!—before the best bargains are snapped up. Don't let National Used Car Exchange Week pass without seizing your great opportunity to DRIVE A BETTER CAR!

Two Vital Projects.

The juggling of highway items in the District budget does no credit to Congress in its capacity as a city council for Washington. Improvements to eliminate traffic hazards or relieve congestion ought to be made in accord with expert advice based on engineering studies. Personal prejudices against some particular project of this sort should have no place in the final action.

After careful study of the entire traffic problem the District Engineer Department outlined a five-year program of improvements. Certainly its judgment ought to be relied upon unless a convincing case to the contrary is forthcoming. But the Senate Appropriations Committee has taken the position that the local authorities do not know what traffic-relief projects are most urgent.

In some respects the attitude taken by the full committee Thursday is more reasonable than that previously indorsed by the sub-committee. Chairman Thomas of the sub-committee would have left a substantial surplus in the highway fund in spite of the fact that this money cannot be spent for general purposes and, if left in the Treasury, would draw no interest. The full committee decided that, since a five-year program of improvements has been outlined and the money is available, it may as well be spent while the District has an acute unemployment problem. Nevertheless, it gratified what appears to be a whim on the part of Senator Thomas by eliminating two of the most vital projects.

From the community viewpoint the underpass beneath Dupont Circle and the K street grade separation were probably the most urgent highway items in the bill. The Senate committee struck out both of them and added various projects of less immediate concern. Restoration of funds for the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge was entirely reasonable. But replacement of the Rock Creek Parkway tunnel under Massachusetts avenue by an expensive open bridge is much less pressing. Either this item or the $540,000 added by the Senate committee for street pavement could be eliminated without seriously disrupting the highway program.

The same cannot be said of the Dupont Circle underpass and the K street grade separation. Construction of the Thomas Circle underpass might well be deferred because of the serious congestion that would result from disruption of traffic on both circles at the same time. But the expenditure of this surplus fund would become almost farcical if the two most vital suggested improvements should be left out. The community can only hope that the Senate and the conference committee will give more weight to sound engineering judgment than the Senate committee has done.

Far Too Complex

A faint idea of the scope and complexity of the omnibus reorganization bill which the Senate is now discussing may be gained from its title: "A bill to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, extending the classified civil service, establishing a General Auditing Office and a Department of Welfare, and for other purposes."

Any one of the specified objectives calls for far-reaching changes in the present administrative set-up and any conscientious legislative disposition of the proposals would require separate consideration of the several parts of the bill.

The President has frequently deplored the Congressional practice of attaching irrelevant riders to appropriation bills and has sought in vain to obtain Congressional approval of the item veto. Yet this omnibus bill, throwing into one jumbled heap a mass of unrelated reorganization plans, is an Administration measure, approved because it is believed that the several parts stand a better chance of passage if linked together. That may prove to be the case, for a casual scanning of the Congressional Record shows that the discussion is arduous going and only a few Senators are making any attempt to participate.

Apart from the impossibility of considering such an extensive program in any detail there is the further difficulty of dealing adequately with certain highly technical issues, such as the proposal to abolish the office of Comptroller General. The question as to whether the proposed change would actually throw down existing safeguards against unlawful expenditures has been argued pro and con with great conviction. But the probabilities are that the debate has merely served to increase the general bewilderment.

To proceed from discussion of highly technical accounting and auditing problems to consideration of plans for setting up an entirely new system of civil service administration adds to the confusion. And by the time the Senate has shifted from these topics to other issues and back again, it may be that an exhausted majority will be ready to approve any kind of reorganization "program."

There is, of course, hope that the Senate will follow a more discriminating course, taking up various aspects of the reorganization plan separately and amending the program in accordance with the precepts of wisdom. That appears to be the intention of those Senators who have been studying the plan in advance. But their preparedness and superior knowledge should be confined to constructive amendments, not utilized in destructive sniping that may destroy desirable features of the program.

A Positive Health Program.

No longer is there any question as to Washington's public health needs. The long list of urgent improvements recommended by the United States Public Health Service in its report to the District Commissioners removes that issue from the realm of controversy. The question which now demands attention is: How can the results of the "generation of neglect" referred to by Surgeon General Parran be most effectively wiped out?

The report is thoroughly constructive in tone. Virtually all of its emphasis is upon improvements that should be made. Yet there is no effort to cover up the unsatisfactory conditions under which the local health department has been forced to operate. Hospital facilities are far from being adequate; there is a critical shortage of public health nurses; in many respects the health and sanitation codes are obsolete, and lunacy is still handled under a "barbaric" law requiring a criminal court jury trial for proper treatment of persons who are mentally ill.

Numerous complaints about Gallinger Hospital were sustained by the investigators. Most of these deplorable conditions were found to stem from "overcrowding and insufficient personnel." Three new buildings are urgently needed, one to replace a fire-trap housing sick children. No less urgent is the need for more nurses, orderlies, a clinical director, social service and laboratory workers. Any hospital lacking in such essential requirements could scarcely be expected to render satisfactory service.

It is especially worthy of note that the Public Health Service indorses the program that Health Officer Ruhland has been attempting to carry out. The plea for health centers, for additional public health nurses, for more hospital facilities and for revision of obsolete statutes dealing with health problems has a familiar ring in Washington. In too many instances, however, it has been ignored. Congress and the Budget Bureau have never really come to grips with the appalling neglect of public health in the Nation's Capital. With the community's efforts now effectively indorsed by the Surgeon General, further neglect could mean only crass indifference to needless sacrifice of life.

Provision of funds for an expanded health program will not be an easy task. Whatever program is adopted will have to be integrated with other community expenses. On the other hand, it should not be assumed that there is any economy in a system which permits contagious diseases to flourish. Treatment is both less expensive and more effective when applied in the early stages of disease. Preventive measures are still more desirable.

The aim of the program outlined for the District by the Public Health Service is to extend medical aid beyond the "terminal care of victims of preventable diseases." In this way it is believed that outlays for expensive hospitals and asylums "undoubtedly can be reduced." From the long-range view the interests of health and economy appear to run in virtually the same direction.

Funds For Flood Control.

The latest disaster in southern California emphasizes again the inadequacy of the financial provision for dealing with floods that yearly exact an enormous toll in lives and property. It is strange that an Administration so impressed with the need for alleviating human suffering caused by unemployment, regardless of the effect upon the budget, is so reluctant to vote funds for eliminating the suffering caused by preventable floods. Even disregarding humanitarian considerations, it is a pennywise policy to postpone construction of emergency flood control projects that would protect taxpayers against loss of property and keep flood sufferers off Federal relief rolls.

A new flood-control measure is reported to be ready for introduction authorizing the construction of preferential projects in various parts of the country. The chief obstacle to its enactment will be the already large prospective deficit next year. But Congress could at least provide some measure of relief to neglected areas by using the $112,000,000 which the Senate proposes to spend during the next few years in the Tennessee Valley for flood-control projects that are urgently needed.

Since over half a billion dollars has already been spent by the TVA, to a large extent for flood-control purposes, there can be no possible excuse for huge additional outlays until the much more pressing emergency needs of the rest of the country have been met. The fact that the policies of the TVA are under fire and an investigation is likely to be ordered is also a reason for deferring construction of another dam in a region which now has four projects under way.

Bureaucratic Reprisals.

Critics of the patronage system as a rule devote most of their attention to its adverse effect upon the efficiency of the governmental administrative services. They seldom discuss the demoralizing effect of the system upon the legislators who dispense patronage. Senators Bailey and King have, however, thrown a new light on an old evil when they charge that certain Government departments have put their names on a "blacklist" because they did not vote "right." The implication is that candidates for appointive positions will be harmed rather than helped by indorsements from offending Senators.

Occasionally the Administration has disciplined Senators unduly critical of its policies by failing to consult their wishes in making appointments to positions in their districts. This sort of indirect pressure upon party adherents to obey executive wishes is no doubt a factor of great importance in controlling legislative decisions—an evil much greater than the available evidence would indicate. Now, in addition to this kind of executive coercion, we are told that Senators are threatened by lesser disgruntled officials armed with appointive powers.

There is, of course, no way of knowing to what extent the bureaucratic reprisals of which Senators Bailey and King complain have become a common practice. But the mere fact that two Senators have been blacklisted suggests possibilities of future bureaucratic influence on the legislative branch of government that are extremely disturbing. Senator Bailey points out that vast power is exercised by nearly a million men and women in the Government service. Furthermore he implies that fear of bureaucratic reprisals has caused Congress to consider delegating its power to reorganize the administrative branch of Government to the President.

"We not only create these agencies," he said, "but we vest in them a tremendous spending power; and we begin to fear, once we see that they have the money, that reaching out over our country and into our States and districts, after all, there is a power mightier than ourselves, and if we undertake to abolish the bureau or the agency or the corporation or the activity and fail, we fear they will make us pay the price on election day."

In past years Americans have had little reason to regard Federal bureaucracy as even a potential menace to our system of representative government. That was because the executive establishments were not numerically formidable and Government officials did not by their control over expenditures affect the welfare of any large number of voters. Today this is no longer true.

Senator Bailey has done a useful service in emphasizing changes that constitute a growing threat to legislative independence. He does not, however, appear to realize that the patronage system gives to Government departments their chief weapons of retaliation against legislators. If all except strictly policy-making positions were placed under the civil service, Senators would have much less need to fear the frowns or seek the favors of bureaucrats, because there would be no jobs to dangle tantalizingly before their eyes.

Sensible Suggestion.

With the Police Court Building rapidly nearing completion, a new suggestion as to its use calls for serious consideration. It was originally planned to leave two courtrooms in the building unfinished pending a day when they might be needed. If they were to be finished immediately, however, the District Attorney, the grand jury and those judges of the Federal District Court assigned to criminal cases could be housed in the new building. The necessary funds are said to be available. Only a determination of the Federal Government's share in the expenses of the building would be needed.

The advantages would be several. The present overcrowding in the district attorney's offices would be relieved. More important, the police officers and lawyers who regularly attend criminal trials as witnesses and counsel might easily participate in more than one case when necessary. As it is today, many cases are postponed because persons interested in a trial but merely waiting in an antiroom, say, at the Federal District Court are unable to appear at other trials in the Police Court across the street. Were all criminal cases heard in one building, witnesses and attorneys might be available for both.

Criminal trials should be greatly expedited as a result. It is to be hoped that the judges who are scheduled to discuss the matter today with the District Commissioners will give their approval to this sensible proposal.

A government never cuts expenses as long as it can trim the taxpayer.

Clergy On Dictatorships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer of the letter which appeared in The Post of February 26 under the heading of "Eden's Resignation," and who signed himself, "Disgusted Youth," is guilty of a grave misstatement. "Under the excuse of combating communism," he writes, "the Nazi propaganda machine has been aided by various Catholic and Protestant officials, who, thinking to save America from bolshevism, have decided to turn it over to the greater menace of National Socialism and the pagan gods of race hatred and war."

Nothing could be further from the truth. I defy anyone to point out a single member of the Catholic or Protestant clergy who has ever uttered one word in favor of any form of totalitarianism for this country. Rather, it can be said without exaggeration, that these men have been the stanchest defenders of our country against all forms of dictatorship. The Catholic clergy especially have been outspoken in their defense of American democracy and in their condemnation of those who would destroy it and build here a Soviet America, a Fascist America or a Nazi America.

Because Catholics, Protestants and all other patriotic Americans are fighting communism does not signify that they have any love for Nazism, Fascism or any other form of totalitarianism. Certainly, opposition to bolshevism does not make one a Fascist or a Nazi. Is the American Legion a Fascist organization because it seeks to defend America against bolshevism? Is the Daughters of the American Revolution a Nazi organization because it is constantly fighting to protect our democracy from the agents of Soviet Russia? Why then should other patriotic Americans be misunderstood when they attack the "Red" menace? Certainly, in opposing communism we are opposing the worst form of totalitarianism, for is not Soviet Russia, to which all Communists pledge allegiance, the most despotic dictatorship in the world today?

Japanese War "Opposition."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your special correspondent in Los Angeles, Elmer T. Peterson, quotes two interesting points, namely, that 95 per cent of Japanese businessmen, in talking with or writing to Americans, "oppose the war" with China, and that their letters are so similar in tone as to suggest instruction from their government.

The instruction from the government are most probable. In 1931 the Japanese completely bamboozled President Hoover and Secretary Stimson by a little song to the effect that the civil government in Japan opposed the war and would soon call it off if there were no outside interference. This news from Los Angeles is one more confirmation that the Japanese are still playing the same game and, so far as I can see, all the American pacifists and a large part of the liberals hasten into the trap.

There is no doubt that Japanese businessmen dislike the war taxes and are opposed to the regimentation of Japanese business by the army. No doubt they deplore the breakdown of the previous policy of taking China over bit by bit with nothing more expensive than local incidents and minor military operations; but this is not "opposed" to the war.

I have yet to see any evidence that even one of the 95 per cent "opposes the war" by openly demanding that it stop, by openly demanding that the Diet refuse appropriations, by openly demanding that the independence of China be respected, or by refusing in any manner whatsoever to support the war to the best of his ability. The truth is that there is no opposition to the war in Japan, if the term "opposition" be given any accurate or significant meaning; and only the wishful thinkers in the United States are taken in by the Japanese propaganda to the contrary.

For Collective Defense.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Granting the isolationists' and pacifists' sincerity, are they pursuing the right course to keep us out of war?

If a mad dog is loose in your neighborhood or you have reason to fear danger from a thief or murderer, is it not the part of wisdom to take every precaution to protect yourself and family from the menace? The international situation is similar. There are nations, inspired by greed and avarice and thirst for power, who have broken every treaty and violated every international law; who are invading other countries and resorting to untold savagery. They are a constant menace to the peace of the world.

So long as such conditions exist no nation is immune from attack, and those who think the United States is invulnerable are living in a fool's paradise. We are a part of the world and cannot escape, even though we should build a Chinese Wall around us and forbid any intercourse with the rest of the universe.

While I would avoid entangling alliances with other nations and retain our right to judge each case upon its merits, yet our own Nation gained its independence with the help of others, and there may come a time when we will be only too glad to have other nations come to our assistance, as they have done several times before in our history. Would it be better to have to fight the forces arrayed against us singly or by collaborating with other nations combat those who conspire against us and other peace-loving nations that respect treaties and are endeavoring to save democracy and, perhaps, civilization itself?

Those who are opposing adequate defense are, maybe unwittingly, enemies to their country. We should have the biggest fleet in the world, besides the best air force and coast defenses available. This is all the more necessary if we are to maintain a "hands off" policy and may have to fight our battles single-handed.

"Jersey Justice."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the recent freeing of Dorothy Schaefer, accused of killing her drunken father in self-defense, "Jersey justice" sets an example to Virginia "justice" as it was meted out to Edith Maxwell under very similar circumstances. Or was it that the New Jersey girl, being younger, was perhaps prettier?

But "Jersey justice" needs all the bolstering it can get right now. A current series of articles by former Gov. Hoffman makes vocal the feelings of thousands of people over the outcome of the Lindbergh affair. Its climax hangs like a black cloud over the records of New Jersey, and one all but sees the ghost of Hauptmann pointing a tenuous, accusing finger at the mysterious train of "witnesses" who arrayed themselves back of the attorney general. When it comes to "The Affaire Hauptmann," will this State ever be allowed to "rest its case?"

Summer Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree with John Rowland Hill's letter in The Post of February 28 relative to Fred R. Ohl's letter of February 26.

Mr. Hill tells Mr. Ohl that summer concerts are not a paying proposition and that the musicians' summer venture ended in financial disaster. Moreover, they are too modest to hand out publicity. Instead they engaged noted scholarly conductors without taking into consideration these conductors' box office appeal.

Nobel Nomination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I beg to inform you that I have recently written to the presidents of all the American Republics, including President Roosevelt, suggesting the name of Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, as a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize.

It is my firm opinion that Dr. Rowe has rendered a most wonderful work in bringing about a perfect and closer understanding among all the nations of the New World. I doubt very much if any other man on the American continent has done as much as Dr. Rowe toward this end. I believe that Dr. Rowe is responsible for the existing fraternity and common viewpoint of the North, South and Central American republics. I may add that at this time, I feel confident Dr. Rowe is the most prominent figure in Latin-American affairs. He has devoted his best years to the Pan-American ideals and in consequence, he should be considered one of the greatest citizens of our continent.

Jibe For Bands.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is all very well to appropriate a lot of money for national defense, as long as that money is used for that purpose. But is it?

Three huge bands are kept in Washington at a cost of nearly $1,000,000 per year, and I would like to know what good either the Army, Navy or Marine Bands are to our military establishments.

The men in the service never hear or see these bands, and the only reason for their existence seems to be the free music they offer to large radio companies.

Even the band in Annapolis serves the local stations in Baltimore with free music, and that band, as the bands in Washington, is equipped with very expensive trappings for radio, such as golden harps, organs and a lot of other instruments never needed by the real military bands.

I think instead of all these expensive bands one 50-piece band should be enough for Washington. Let the radio people pay for their own bands!

Our Southern Neighbors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having recently been on a cruise in the Caribbean Sea, which enabled me to visit such countries and "good neighbors" as Colombia and Venezuela (Little Venice), I was particularly impressed with the modern progress in the latter country, much of it due to the rich oil fields. Venezuela has no foreign debt but it has splendid highways, etc.

I was also pleased to note the general use of American products, such as trucks, automobiles, buses and also American breakfast foods, as well as patent medicines and toilet articles, not to mention the ever-popular American movies, under Spanish titles, and there is an ever-increasing demand for American goods. But there is one drawback, and that is the inhabitants have not the money to satisfy their demands.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull's "Good Will" and reciprocity treaties should, and will no doubt, remedy this.

I was informed by a cultured Venezuelan that in their state of Bolivar there are rich mines of gold, silver, diamonds and other precious minerals, but that gold mines only are worked, and, in the same primitive way as inaugurated by the Spanish padres who discovered them.

When it is realized that Venezuela is as large as England, Germany and Japan combined, and has less than 4,000,000 population, we can readily see what a rich field there is for American capital, engineers and settlers.

Why not forget troublesome Asia and give attention to our good and rich neighbors in South America?

Firebug.

JUST after I was born, Mother and Dad took a small second-floor apartment that backed up to a firehouse. There was only a wall between our bedroom and the gong, and you could hear it anywhere in the whole apartment. They got a book with all the alarm box locations and numbers, and before long they knew most of them by heart. — In those days the family's only means of locomotion was by foot or trolley. When they followed the fire engines I was left with the woman downstairs—this wasn't an infrequent occurrence. On one of these occasions they followed the reddish glow of a fire across half of Richmond. They reached the end of the car track only to find the now-diminishing glow came from beyond a hill. By the time they reached the top there was no more glow, but in the distance they saw the smoldering remains of a large barn.

When I was 6 months old they bought a second-hand motorcycle with a side car and we all chased fires—we still do, but now there are two boys and a car big enough for all of us.

At home there is a fire engine house on our block and during the summer when things are all open you can hear the alarm, but even in the winter, when everything is shut up, no one has ever failed to hear the engines when they went out. If you're in bed, you pile out, grabbing shoes, socks and a coat. On they go over pajamas. The quickest fellow beats it to the attic to see if he can see a glow or, better still, some flames—then you know it's a big fire.

All the best fires are at night—they're easier to find and much more fun to watch. The night the Richmond Academy of Music burned it was cold—cold enough to freeze the water in the gutters. When we saw flames from the boys' bedroom window we didn't stop for anything but socks and coats. The socks came up over the bottom of the pajama trousers and a coat covered the rest.

We got there just behind the second hook and ladder. The building was a mass of red, blue and orange flames all boiling over each other and licking out of every opening. The roof had gone first and tremendous flames writhed upward. Sometimes the flames burst from the air many feet above the fire, or a tongue would end as if snuffed out only to flare up again from nowhere. For hours firemen poured water into that furnace from the roofs of nearby buildings, from the street and the alley and the walls. One side waved, crumbled and broke in the middle—loose plaster, bricks, the whole wall fell in. For a moment the roar of the flames ceased; there was a long rumble and the sound of rushing air. By the time the sounds reached us the fire was raging again.

Since then I've been to lots of fires in various places, but it wasn't until I got married and came to Alexandria that I followed a volunteer fire force. When there is a fire they ring a big bell that can be heard all over the neighborhood. One warm Sunday shortly after I came here the fire bell rang just as we were getting up. I slipped into my shoes and shirt at the same time, pulled a sweater over my head, ran a comb through my hair and was ready to go just as the first engines passed the house. My husband stood looking at me—as though I might be a little bit crazy. No, he wouldn't go—he doesn't like fires.

I never was in favor of going to fires alone—you miss half the fun because one person can't see everything. Nevertheless, I followed the fire engines down our street, across the railroad yards to a fertilizer plant. It wasn't a big fire, but one that had possibilities—there was a great quantity of sulphur on the ground and in the lower part of the building.

A group of people stood nearby watching the firemen rather than the fire that was eating its way along the eaves of the building. There was no excitement, no one hurried; it was all right. A boy of about 18 placed a ladder against the shed, two other volunteers pulled it up onto the roof, tied a rope to one end and then tried to untangle the knotted mass. Before they succeeded someone had got to the second roof without the use of the ladder. The barefooted boy climbed up while the other fireman rolled his trousers above his knees. It was just as well, for a little later, when he was stomping on the edge of the roof to see how much weight it would hold, he went through and the little flames singed his legs—what are a few hairs compared with a burnt or torn trouser?

Below, a big husky sat on the edge of the hook and ladder's running board and leisurely changed from shoes and socks to boots. Around the corner of the building six colored men manned a hose and put out the fire under the roof's edge. They had a large audience who cheered when the pressure shot the water high in the air and mourned when the stream dwindled to a trickle.

You Can't Forget.

THEY TELL me that being a reporter is very interesting business. But somehow, I wish I hadn't seen some of the things I've seen.

I wish I hadn't seen the children!

McCARTHY.

They tell me that children are the things to wait for, and idolize, but somehow there was an element of sadness in the children I saw. I wish I hadn't seen them.

They were normal children. And they were average children . . . but there was a sadness in them. They were just two floors above the stumblebums. They were the children of the poor.

"My Mommy," said Katherine, "lives with my Pappy, but they ain't married!"

Katherine was a little girl that anybody could love. She was blonde. She was full of smiles and good teeth. And she chuckled.

"What's the matter?" I asked "that you're down here, and other little girls are at home."

"I dunno," she said, "s'cept my Mommy and Pappy they don't live like other people."

Katherine may have been wrong, but that's the answer most of the kids down at Central Union Mission might have given.

You see, if the parents are separated, or the parents don't (in the language of the gossip columnist) live together the children are up a creek.

But they're little kids. They're kids like Katherine. They are kids with good teeth. They are kids with smiles who wonder why they are not like other children in the block.

• • • •

Down at Central Union Mission, when the parents of the little kids are breaking-up, they take them in. They treat them nicely. They give them toys, and they try to make them happy.

They take in the kids whose parents are being divorced, and they take in the kids whose parents were never married . . . and because it never gets in the papers the kids are the only ones who wonder about it.

When I saw the kids down there, so much like other kids, I wondered what the hell was wrong with their parents, I wondered what the hell was wrong with life, that kids like that wouldn't have anybody to turn to.

• • • •

SOMETIMES, in line with my job, I went down to Ninth street. There, they have movie houses where you can go in for 15 cents. The young lady in the cashier's cage told me that some of the patrons came in at 10 in the morning. They came in at 10 in the morning and they stayed till it was dark. They were the homeless ones. They ate peanuts on what they bummed along the streets, and they stayed in there for ten hours.

I wish I hadn't seen them shifting from side to side in their seats, knowing that they had no place to go and that they were trapped by the warmth and music of a dime showhouse on Ninth street. Because all of them weren't so old, and because all of them weren't so done in.

• • • •

SOMETIMES I wish that I hadn't seen the Southern Conference Inter-Collegiate boxing bouts. I wish I hadn't seen the tall guy, being hit in the mouth so often. I wish I hadn't seen the tall guy go down to the floor six times in three rounds. I wish he didn't have that grin and I wish he hadn't been so smiley about it when the other guy brought a right up from the floor.

They tell me that he was being a good sport about it. They tell me that he had a lot of guts. They tell me that he was representing a school, and that he was willing to take a beating so that his college could be represented.

They tell me that the big guy was willing to be knocked down a half a dozen times in three rounds and was willing to have a bit of blood on his face so that his school could be represented.

Nobody that saw it will forget how he grinned . . . with the blood on his face. Maybe, that's his reward, but I wish I hadn't seen it.

• • • •

I LIKE to watch big guys that are sure of themselves. I like to watch tough guys. I like to watch guys who can handle themselves.

But I still can't get it out of my mind . . . the idea of the 220-pound policeman who pressed a 100-pound girl against the iron railings around the Willard Hotel, cursed her out in language no man would use, threatened her with his physical strength . . . because she was what is known as a "street walker."

And I can't forget her face. It was frightened. It wasn't a bad face. It was young . . . pretty enough . . . and simply frightened.

• • • •

AND I can't forget the burly cop who took a slight cab driver and hauled him over the coals, because he parked in the wrong place. And the cop spat out indecencies. And the cab driver took them. Because the cab driver had a wife and four children at home. And he was trying to support them.

And he couldn't get out of the cab and slap the cop on the jaw, because he wasn't a very big fellow. And he had the idea of his wife and four children back in his head.

And no matter how tough you are, you can't forget the wife and four children.

And no matter how tough you are, you can't forget those things!

Our Danger

By Pearl Buck.

Aids To Dictatorship.

BUT HERE IS our danger—no great change in the life of a people comes about suddenly and openly. It comes about through a combination of the exigency of circumstance, the ambition of individuals, and the resulting subtle and slow change in the temper of a despairing people. The change is most often unperceived by the people and known only to those who are endeavoring to bring about that change.

For there are in our democracy certain groups and forces which are aids to dictatorship—not only the Nazi momement in the United States, but others less avowed. Militarism, for example, is definitely linked with a totalitarian state. Such a state must use militarism to control its people and to advance its empire, this advance being in itself an important means of control by diverting the mind of the populace from its own actual situation. Militarism, indeed, anywhere, is linked with those forces which tend toward totalitarianism.

THE ARMY and the navy are really little totalitarian states in themselves, and those who control them inevitably think in terms of regulation, force and absolute power, and naturally they tend to expand such preconceived ideas and habits to other parts of life. That is, the militarist mind thinks like the dictator mind, and in a crisis will support it. Those whom we citizens of the American democracy must watch most closely, therefore, are our militarist minds, the minds of men who from the very structure and type of their brains think in terms of control by the arbitrary means of compulsion and secrecy and not by persuasion and popular will and open discussion of policies and plans.

For we Americans are not to be held like the peoples in totalitarian states, dumb creatures to be kept ignorant and uninformed and compelled to obey laws and policies we do not understand and have not made. No, and on the day that we are so held, if we do not rise up in our old way and demand our old freedom, then America, too, is dead, and lost with the others in the confusion of the world. For in confusion the only light to lead us out is the whole light of human reasoning and thinking and feeling, untrammeled and free, not the single mind of one man. There has never been a man great enough to be a dictator, and there is not one today.

Japan's Wings

China Expedition Has Revealed New Air-Mindedness Of Tokyo, Which Is Causing Revisions In Asiatic Defense Plans.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

WHEN Japan's empire-builders embarked last August on their crusade to "chastise China" and "establish lasting peace in the Orient," there were not a few foreigners who thought China would deal her foe a crushing blow. "Look at Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's German-trained armies," they said, "look at China's newly found unity; look at her air armada, with its American-trained pilots and the best aircraft that money can buy."

Aviation. That was thought to be the ace in China's sleeve which she was going to throw on the table in her hour of crisis. And for a day, China's youthful airmen lived up to the general expectations.

From the roof of a skyscraper on Shanghai's famed Bund, I watched a squadron of Chinese Boeings fly into the teeth of certain death on August 14. Ringed by puffs of white smoke, Chinese airmen one after another made courageous but vain attempts to "get" the Japanese cruisers on the Whangpoo River.

But on August 15, out of cloud-laden, stormy skies, 56 four-motored Japanese bombers—more than most people thought Japan had—swooped down upon Nanking, Hangchow, Nanchang and other major Chinese cities and rained death. Eight of these machines were shot down by Chinese anti-aircraft batteries. The rest, despite the typhoon, returned home.

Four days later, another armada paid a second destructive visit to Chinese airfields, arsenals, railway stations, government buildings and military establishments. This time, all machines returned to the base intact.

Japanese Mastered Air Within A Week.

IN A WEEK, the Japanese were masters of the air. With most of the Chinese airmen shot down and with the Chinese airfields subjected to daily raids, the Nanking government's ace in the sleeve ceased to be a factor in the Sino-Japanese game. In subsequent weeks, while the world was severely condemning Japanese airmen for attacking peaceful towns, the general staff in Washington, Moscow, London, Paris and Amsterdam—swayed by sentiment—began to revise their Pacific strategy. And such a revision appeared to be urgently necessary.

Japanese airplanes making their daily raids upon Canton compelled a hundred-fold strengthening of Hongkong's defenses against attacks from the air. Similar preparations were made in Indo-China, where the intentionally obvious Japanese designs on the neighboring island of Hainan gave the French authorities a case of very bad jitters. From Hainan, Japanese airplanes can dominate South China and Hongkong, and make raids upon the supposedly invincible $100,000,000 British base in Singapore.

British-India and the Dutch-East Indies, the latter with their immensely rich oil fields, also lie exposed to Japanese aerial attacks. Both are already feverishly rearming themselves, the Dutch with American-made bombers and pursuit planes.

With the Chinese example before their eyes, military experts no longer believe in the once-popular myth that the Japanese cannot fly.

The bombing of Panay was a disgusting, stupid blunder of the first magnitude. But as a military performance, it was impressive. Flying at the altitude of about 5,000 feet, the Japanese airmen scored a direct hit on the tiny gunboat's bridge. A few minutes later, another well-aimed bomb set two Standard Oil tankers on fire. It was this bombing of the 460-ton warship, perhaps more than anything else, that riveted the world's attention to Japan's air force—a new, important factor in the intricate Pacific strategy.

No Air Force Existed In Japan 10 Years Ago.

ONLY A DECADE ago, Japan had practically no air force. When in 1931 the Kwantung army began to build a continental empire at the expense of China, a few military aircraft assisted in driving the disorganized Chinese out of Manchuria. The machines were large, slow, outdated crates whose main effect was psychological.

In subsequent years, the Japanese Parliament obediently voted large sums of money for the development of aviation. But the disposal of these funds remained shrouded in mystery, and the world at large remained unaware of what was going on in Japan's huge, zealously guarded airplane works in Nagoya, Osaka and Tokyo.

Japan served her first warning last May, when two of her "Lindberghs," Iinuma and Tsukakoshi, flew in an all-Japan-made monoplane, Divine Wind, from Tokyo to London in the record time of 96 hours. A fortnight later, loaded with movie films of the coronation of King George VI, the plane made a leisurely five-day return journey to Nippon.

The flight was started as an advertising stunt by the enterprising and rich Asahi chain of newspapers. Success canonized it into a national triumph. To the Japanese man-in-the-street the achievement was epoch-making, for the machine was built by Japanese engineers of Japanese materials, and it was flown by two shy, adventurous Japanese youths. The craft flew to London at an average speed of 180 miles per hour without the slightest mishap. The airplane, a British daily in Kobe later pointed out with tongue in the cheek, could be easily converted to military uses. And it was. Light bombers suspiciously like the Divine Wind were seen by many an expert over Shanghai.

As war with China progressed, the quality of the airplanes brought here by the Japanese navy steadily improved. Replicas of the German Heinkel twin-motored bombers were seen here by the score. Japanese pursuit planes amazed all observers, for they outflew and outclimbed the Curtis Hawks and the sensational stub-nosed E. I. 16's of Soviet Russia which were used with such phenomenal success in Spain.

Navy Fliers Found Exceptionally Trained.

MEN WHO HAD made a close study of the question were equally impressed by the personnel of the navy and army air branches—more by the former than by the latter. Discipline, esprit de corps, courage, physical stamina, technical skill were all found to be exceptionally high.

But there were also some glaring defects, typical of the Japanese uniformed men. While blind obedience is demanded and received from the lower ranks, the so-called "younger officers," from lieutenants to captains, suffer from acute fanaticism, which listens to no reason, recognizes no restrictions.

Such fanatics precipitated the Manchurian incident of 1931. Such fanatics were responsible for some of the goriest chapters of Japan's recent domestic history. Such fanatics should probably be held guilty of bombing the U. S. S. Panay, H. M. S. Ladybird and British and American merchantmen on the muddy Yangtze.

Another defect is the notable absence of initiative, the outstanding trait in the American and European air forces. As long as an average Japanese flier follows instructions, he carries them out well and faithfully. Once confronted with conditions not covered by his orders, he is lost.

Still another shortcoming is the absence of civilian reserves. In the United States or Germany, virtually thousands of commercial pilots could be called to the colors in an emergency. In Japan, this number does not exceed a few hundred. Only in January of this year, did the government act to replenish its human reserves. The ministry of communications was given $75,000,000 to be spent in the next five years for the expansion of commercial air routes, technical research and training of civilian pilots.

Universities Conduct Air Research Classes.

EVEN THE ministry of education is doing its bit. Aeronautical research departments will be opened in various universities, with the aim of graduating by 1941 200 aeronautical engineers, instead of the present 10.

The Japanese have embarked on an empire-building path which must eventually bring them into an open conflict with one or more of the great Occidental powers. The army is already sharpening its bayonets for a clash with Red Russia, while the navy, with equal zeal, is preparing for a combat with perfidious Albion.

The United States may stay out of the current Sino-Japanese embroglio. She will find it more difficult to stay out of the next major war in the Pacific. For this reason, she will do well to keep a watchful eye on Japan's growing air force.

The Armaments Race Goes On.

THE IMMEDIATE factors responsible for the decision of Great Britain, France, the United States and other countries to increase their rearmament efforts even beyond the back-breaking limits fixed only a little while ago are not hard to find. But so far as the general picture is concerned their importance can easily be exaggerated.

In Europe the development of greatest contemporary significance is the belligerent note struck by Hitler in his Reichstag speech of February 20 and even more so by Gen. Hermann Goering in his address this week celebrating the third anniversary of the establishment of the Third Reich's air force.

Germany today, it is clear, is not prepared to be satisfied merely with having set aside the more onerous provisions of the Treaty of Versailles. Hitler has now given notice that the Third Reich, having smashed the peace treaty, now plans to go forward toward the earlier objective of achieving the hegemony over central Europe.

Hitler, in fact, has declared a moral protectorate over the "10,000,000 Germans" living along the Third Reich's border, which means over all the Austrians and the 3,000,000 German-speaking citizens of Czechoslovakia. And Goering has let it be known that the protection of the rights of these 10,000,000 is one of the functions assigned to the Nazi air force.

• • • •

NOT SURPRISINGLY the French have countered by deciding to spend more money than ever on their defense system—already at a high peak of effectiveness. They do not propose to be unprepared should the developing crisis lead to armed conflict. And the very circumstance that the present British government is very much inclined to wash its hands of any commitments east of the Rhine has only increased the French determination to rearm. They cannot ignore Austria and Czechoslovakia as the British believe they can.

The British, for their part, are not at all clear how the present European situation will develop. The incipient negotiations with Mussolini may lead to a friendly adjustment of Anglo-Italian difficulties and thus ease existing tensions in the Mediterranean. But they are not so sure. And, at any rate, the new German attitude is cause for alarm.

After all, the British remain as exposed as ever to an air attack from the continent. And when they think of an air attack they have Germany definitely in mind. No wonder, then, that one of the principal items in their expanded rearmament program (expanded, that is beyond the $7,500,000,000 program adopted last year) is a rapid building up of British air force.

• • • •

IN THE MEANTIME Japan's evasive attitude regarding the naval construction policies of the island empire have made it necessary for both Great Britain and the United States to re-examine the limits placed on certain types of naval craft by the London agreement of 1936. This is in addition to the necessity they now find themselves in, as a result of the Far East situation, to build up their tonnages as rapidly and as extensively as possible.

Indeed, Senator Pittman now urges that the naval construction plans contemplated in the Vinson bill up before Congress are already out of date and should be increased in scope.

But the speeches of Hitler and Goering, the Austrian crisis, Great Britain's flirtations with Italy, Japan's secrecy on naval matters and so on by no means tell the whole story of the why and wherefore of the expanding armaments race. These developments merely emphasize the truth of the fact that a nation like a man, when faced by mounting dangers in a setting of complete anarchy and lawlessness, will arm to the teeth at whatever cost.

• • • •

THE PRESENT ghastly situation provides the United States and other peace-loving nations with an extremely expensive lesson in the costs of isolation.

The very circumstance that this nation, geographically the most isolated of the great powers, finds itself caught up in a race not of our making, is proof that from the viewpoint of our reality we are not, never have been and under no conceivable circumstances that the American people would tolerate, can ever be isolated. For better or for worse we are part and parcel of the world. The spreading international chaos has obviously not left us untouched. On the contrary it has contributed to our uneasiness as it has contributed to the uneasiness of every other nation that believes in peace and a decent world order.

Will rearmament ease our fears? Possibly but not likely. We or any other nation may, momentarily, achieve a superiority in armaments to the degree necessary to insure absolute security. But rearmament is not an isolated phenomenon but a universal one. Because others have begun to pile up armaments we find it necessary to do likewise. And as we rearm that gives a further impetus to the rearmament efforts of others. Thus the race gets faster and more furious with bankruptcy staring every nation—even the richest—in the face. But no nation dare cease unless the others do likewise.

So, in the long run, we shall all be back to the starting point, but with our nerves more ragged, with our resources more depleted, with bankruptcy much nearer than now. And then, as now, whether or not we shall be able to stop piling up armaments will depend, primarily, not on our wishes but on the world situation which we insist we have nothing to do with.

10. Yes, he is now about 14.
11. What is he doing now?
12. Making everybody miserable.
13. How does Felix make everybody miserable?
14. He fights boys half his size, heaves rocks at peddlers, uses a slingshot on his teachers and defies his parents.
15. Why isn't he disciplined?
16. It's impossible. And besides, somebody told his parents a child's personality should be allowed to develop unhampered.

III.

17. Look who's here!
18. Felix again, as I live! He is now 35.
19. What is he doing?
20. Clinching his hold on the title of Town Bully.
21. He will argue with anybody on anything. His motto is "Felix is always right."
22. What is the general reaction to him?
23. The folks predict that, because he is such an opinionated, vain, noisy, intolerant braggart, he may grow up and become a dictator or at least a runner-up.
24. Is he irresponsible enough to qualify for that?
25. He will be within another few years.

IV.

26. Who is this?
27. This is Felix ten years or so later.
28. What is Felix doing now?
29. Shouting into mikes, thumping tables, bellowing from balconies, shouting defiance to the world and making a pest of himself on a big scale.
30. Is he still bullying people?
31. He has specialized in it to a point where he is now tops.
32. Has Felix made good his early promise?
33. Oh, yes. He is now one of the great dictators of Europe.
34. And do people really take orders from him willingly?
35. They love it.
36. What is the argument that sways them?
37. Nobody knows, except that it is all in a loud, clear voice with appropriate chest expansion and facial contortions.
38. How do you explain it?
39. We don't even attempt it.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

— By Scott Hart.

FASHION NOTE: When, at long last, the Prince of Wales used to spring a new Swiss fedora on his admiring public, the admiring public promptly attired itself in the same kind of Swiss fedora. When the Prince came out in a new kind of sporty shoes the admiring public soon wore the same. Now comes to town the Sultan of Muscat (who undoubtedly fixes the styles where he goes along) in a suit of long underwear — according to our agent 2-Q. And this Federal world, which likes to follow suit, finds itself, with some embarrassment, facing the advent of spring and hot weather . . .

Add Art Defiant Deparment: On at least two occasions this column has, with regret and sufficient chagrin, reported how the FCA Lending Library was holding sales of books of merit, at such reduced prices as 25 cents and 50 cents . . . Now, the A. F. G. E.'s Government Standard through typographical error, tried to sell off Baruch's pamphlet on Position Classification for 10 cents when the price should have been 25 cents. Evidently Baruch raised a squawk because the Standard, in current issue, makes the amende honorable, saying the price is 25 cents and not 10 cents—which would further have bowed man's art in the dust.

New Deal Aims Still the Same, Says Roosevelt

Roosevelt

praised the new crop control legislation as a step in that direction.

He said he still favored placing a floor under wages and a ceiling on hours of labor and asserted that that objective also would be achieved, even if it were not this year. He defended the principle of the undistributed profits tax and the loop-hole-plugging tax bill of last summer as measures aimed at special privilege. He opposed repeal of the existing provision for publicity of salaries paid by corporations in excess of $15,000.

Aside from these specifications, Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were of a general nature. He defended the varying course of the Administration in regard to prices, asserting some people confused policies and objectives with measures.

A year ago, he said, when inflationary trends loomed large, he put the helm of the ship of state hard to the starboard to prevent the ship from leaving its course. Last autumn, he went on, when the economic winds shifted in a deflationary direction, he swung the helm hard to the port in order to keep the ship on its course. He denied this constituted any change of policy.

Social Conscience Roused.

The President thought much had been accomplished during the last five years in arousing the social consciousness of the Nation and causing industrialists and businessmen to think concretely in terms of share-croppers and agricultural prosperity when considering their own problems. He said many industrialists were coming to have a favorable opinion of the farm legislation. He hoped they would express their favor publicly. He also thought progress had been made in eliminating the influence of pressure groups on the Government, since there was a tendency to think of problems in national terms rather than sectional or group terms.

Mr. Roosevelt said his declaration of the social objectives of the New Deal, which he made June 7, 1935, in reply to a question by the late Robert Cromie, editor of the Vancouver Sun, still stood. On that occasion Mr. Roosevelt authorized quotation of what he said, and the White House again yesterday made that statement available.

His Social Objectives.

"What would you say was the social objective of the Administration?" asked Cromie.

"That is a difficult subject to discuss offhand," the President replied. "It would take an hour or two hours at least.

"The social objective, I should say, remains just what it was, which is to do what any honest government of any country would do; to try to increase the security and the happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations of life and in all parts of the country; to give them more of the good things of life; to give them a greater distribution, not only of wealth in the narrow terms, but of wealth in the wider terms; to give them places to go in the summertime—recreation; to give them assurance that they are not going to starve in their old age; to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give everyone a chance to earn a living.

Difficult to Define.

"It is a little difficult to define it, and I suppose this is a very offhand definition, but unless you go into a long discusion, it is hard to make it more definite. And I think, however, that we are getting somewhere toward our objective."

During the press conference, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the Fifteenth Psalm, which had been read during the religious service he had just attended. He said that if he were a reporter he would use that Psalm story.

Fraud Charged In U.S. Agencies By Comptroller authorized accounts," the report said.

Treasury spokesmen later said the Treasury had been unable to comply with the statute because the Comptroller General's Office had failed to supply the Secretary of the Treasury with the information required by law.

The second report received from Elliott criticized National Guard officers in several States for allegedly charging the Government for fictitious supplies and helping enlisted men get paid for drills from which they were absent.

"Numerous methods have been devised, apparently by officials of the WPA, for irregular procurement of various classes of supplies," this report stated.

Elliott said the Air Commerce Bureau spent $78,768 for nine planes without authority. He said the Maritime Commission paid an $88,175 subsidy to a steamship line which owed the Government $3,933,106.

One method used to avoid competitive bidding, according to Elliott, included use of restrictive specifications which enabled the Resettlement Administration to purchase the make of automobile it desired.

Full use of the report is expected to be made by Senators fighting abolition of the General Accounting Office, as one of the bitterest battles in the reorganization bill centers around the usefullness of that agency as a Treasury watchdog.

"Executive control over public expenditures" was attacked yesterday by Vandenberg as an "unfortunate and ill-advised concentration of authority." The Michigan Republican singled this feature of the bill, with proposed establishment of a single Civil Service administrator, as targets for criticism.

"They are particularly unfortunate and ill-advised at a difficult moment in our history when the crying need of the hour is an assurance to America that we are not going further down the road toward authoritarian, centralized, one-man Government in the United States," Vandenberg said.

Later yesterday, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, again took the floor in defense of the measure. Two other Democratic Senators—Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania—defended Civil Service features of the Byrnes bill.

But Guffey argued that Civil Service developed inefficiency, protected incompetence and fostered extravagance. He said it "takes the ambition out of most people as soon as they get a lifetime job."

"Everybody," said O'Mahoney, "acknowledges that the task of reorganization ought to be performed but no one has been able to do anything about it—and probably no one ever will be able unless the present effort is successful."

O'Mahoney said the bill gave the President no extraordinary powers, but simply told him that "five Presidents before you have tried unsuccessfully and now you try your hand at it."

To charges that the bill did not specify any fixed economy objective, O'Mahoney said it called for reduction to the "fullest extent consistent with efficient operation." He said it would be difficult, if not impossible, to promise more than that, because of constant public pressure for expansion of Government activities.

"There is nothing in the bill to deprive Congress of its power to curtail appropriations," O'Mahoney pointed out. "No agency, old or new, practical or visionary, can live or function without funds provided by Congress."

Earle Theater Turns on Heat In Torrid Bill

'Battle of Swing' on Stage and Lively Picture Are Flaming Features.

"LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Clements Ripley, Michel Jacoby, Robert Buckner and Lawrence Kimble, featuring Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane, with John Litel, Thomas Mitchell, Dick Foran, Barbara O'Neill, Mona Barrie, Minor Watson, Donald Briggs, Margaret Irving, Gregory Gaye, Dickie Moore and Crauford Kent. Directed by Stanley Logan. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Earle Theaterr.

Between the impact of that "Battle of Swing" on the stage and alternate family fights and "pitching of woo" on the screen, the Earle management ought to turn on their cooling system this week, regardless of outside blizzards. The show is hotter than the boat deck of a tropical liner.

The "Battle of Swing" may properly be considered a triple contest instead of just a double, because although Don Bester and Rita Rio are swing aces, our own Earle orchestra also puts in some mighty wicked "hot licks."

It is with pleasure that this feminine critic records that the distaff battler of the Swing Battle of Bull Run, Rita Rio, produces hotter swing than Don Bester. But then Don puts out sweeter swing than Rita. And the Earle orchestra offers its music both sweet 'n' hot. Perhaps we'd better call it a dead heat. We mean, a hot heat.

Zip and Zippers!

Rita Rio might almost be called the "feminine Cab Calloway." Her impersonation of Cab is really more Cab-ish than Cab—except for her gorgeous figger, just as stunning as Ina Rae Hutton's than which there is no praisier praise. The Rio cohorts wound up with "La Cucaracha" played in both sugary and steaming style. If there is any criticism of Rita it is that she is a bit too uncurbed in waving her incomparable physique about in the Harlem manner. After all, there's no real reason for her risking dislocation of her hips—and the audience's morale. Her clothes are gorgeous and fastened with zippers, doubtless, for a reason.

Don Bestor's boys put on their smooth but startling rhythms so as to evoke recurring bursts of applause. Particularly appreciated were Duckie Young's wickedly stammering songs, plus comedy. Don played his odd specialty instrument, that cross between an organ and piano, with subtle and dreamy effects supplemented by prize saxophone melodics. Don swings it sweet and low compared to Rita, but thinking it over, this critic will retract earlier statements and confess that she likes Don's music-a the best. We shall not give ourself another chance to reconsider.

Mixed in with the epochal rhythm combat are M. C. Dick Ware, suave and something of a dancer, and Marcy Brothers and Beatrice, who combine an amazing energy with an equally astounding lack of taste. But the audience liked it, we hasten to say.

Best of all were Phillips and Kohl, perfectionists in the "shag." This pair of kids—they are no more—are really pretty marvelous in their line, with the boy the better in amazing agility and rhythm.

There Is a Picture.

"Love, Honor and Behave" is not only one of the gayest little comedies of the season, it went over terrifically with the young folks that always pack Friday matinees (we suspect the truant officer ought to catch the lil' rascals).

Also it brings out a little girl, Priscilla Lane, who unless we miss our guess, is due to be quite a star. Priscilla is not just pretty in the Hollywood manner, she is gifted with a roguery and mischief all her own. Nor does excellent direction account for her peculiar gifts. No, we think the gal has something, something a bit unique in modernity and audacity. More power to her.

The story is audacious, too, in that it involves both modern parents and modern children. Priscilla and Wayne Morris elope—and have to tell the story to assorted divorced parents, former girl friends and former boy friends of said parents. It's all very diverting, especially to graduates of the prohibition period. The general attitude, too, gives hope that the current young folks are going to live up, or down, to the uncanny but free-for-all standards of the prohibition era. Ah, and that perfect happy ending with young husband and wife cherishing connubial black eyes and affection!

Columbia

It is a pleasant, even if not too convincing, a fable that is unreeled in "The Baroness and the Butler," which resumed its F street popularity yesterday as chief feature of the screen bill at Loew's Columbia Theater. For most of its length this brittle tale of a glorified butler and an aristocratic baroness adheres to the acceptable rules of logic and romantic possibility. In its final moments it goes more than a little haywire, to coin a phrase.

Much is done for the integrity of the film by the excellent work of William Powell and Annabella in the title roles. Mr. Powell, of course, is known to be an adept at this particular type of portrayal, having made a stupendous hit of "My Man Godfrey," with Carole Lombard, and otherwise demonstrated his capacity for deftness and humor under seemingly adverse circumstances. Of Annabella, the young European actress, who seems content to be identified by a single name, not quite so much can be said. The deficiency is not to be found in her acting, but Annabella, as yet, has not sufficiently conquered the intricacies of the English tongue to be always comprehensible.

However, there are numerous other performances in "The Baroness and the Butler" that place the film definitely among the exhibits of the screen's better acting. Foremost among these contributions are those of Henry Stephenson and Helen Westley. Mr. Stephenson is cast as the premier, who doesn't do so well, and Miss Westley, as his wife, who, in the matter of mental alertness, never did. Then there are other fine impersonations by Nigel Bruce and that increasingly impressive actor, whether on stage or screen, Joseph Schildkraut.

The picture has been produced in Twentieth Century-Fox's best manner, and is supplemented, as usual, by the shorter screen subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Romance in the Dark' Tuneful Frolic; 'Red' Skelton Returns to the Capitol

Boles, Swarthout, Barrymore Star in Operatic Film; Ace Stage Show.

Helps Streamline That Revue

"ROMANCE IN THE DARK." Paramount picturization of Herman Bahr's stage play of "The Yellow Nightingale," adapted to the screen by Frank Parfos and Anne Morrison Chapin, starring John Boles, Gladys Swarthout and John Barrymore, with Claire Dodd, Eddie Conrad, Curt Bois, Fritz Feld and operatic and dancing ensemble. Directed by H. C. Potter. Previewed Tuesday, March 1. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

One's leaning is inclined to be all on the side of the music in this transcription to celluloid of Herman Behr's play of "The Yellow Nightingale." Its dramatic fiber seems just a little attenuated, although structual weaknesses are largely overbalanced by the skill of the players chosen by Paramount for the pivotal roles.

BELL.

The matter of plot resolves itself into a contest for feminine conquest between a noted operatic baritone and his wily manager, who entertains a discriminating and predatory sense of distaff allurements. The object of their spirited rivalry in time becomes the young singer who aspired to an operatic career and begins as a maid in the apartment of the baritone as a start toward her appointed goal. From that time on, the proceedings take on the color of petty peccadilloes, major deceptions, mistaken identities and "friendly" double-crossings that somehow do not quite add up to convincing drama.

But there is compensation in the music. The background of the play, of course, is operatic. There are frequent intervals of impressive interpolation of standard arias and scenes from the major operas admirably suited to the fine voices of John Boles and Gladys Swarthout. It has been remarked on this page on a previous occasion that seldom has such perfect blending of voices been heard. Mr. Boles, as is well known, was a pupil of the late Jean De Reske. Miss Swarthout is a Metropolitan star of the first rank. They comprise a singing combination that is one of the most satisfactory to music lovers that the cinema so far has been able to effect.

Barrymore Shines.

On the comedy side, John Barrymore is the picture's outstanding star. His performance in the role of Jason, the crafty impresario, is not the funniest creation he has brought to the screen, but it is so deftly turned, so adroitly maneuvered and executed with such consummate polish that it takes rank with the celluloids' most facile portrayals.

Among the subsidiary players there are a few who add appreciably to the sum total of the film's effectiveness. The are Claire Dodd, Curt Bois and Fritz Feld, although Mr. Feld's work as Kovach's "gentleman's gentleman" strikes this observer as being a shade on the side of a vague carbon copy of Luis Alberni's peculiar facility at this sort of thing.

Reverting momentarily to Miss Swarthout, it is a little surprising to find her playing a "soubrette" role in the earlier sequences of "Romance in the Dark"—for that is what the maid's role amounts to Still there is precedent for this departure from accepted casting. Both Fritzi Scheff and Emma Trentini were "soubrettes" in an earlier day of the Metropolitan Opera Co. Miss Swarthout is an even more attractive and glamorous one.

"Red" Scores Again.

Even were "Romance in the Dark" not as good as it is, this week's bill at the Cauitol would be buoyed to a top spot in entertainment ratings by the caliber of the "Streamlined Revue," that returns "Red" Skelton to the F street stage. The elongated and energetic Mr. Skelton, who has played extended engagements at the Capitol on at least two previous occasions, is one of the most spontaneous, indefatigable and versatile comedians I know. There seems to be no end to the resourcefulness of the fellow. He is at the top of his form this week, assisted in his antic efforts by the charming Edna Stillwell, whom one suspects of being Mrs. Red Skelton in private life.

Then, too, on the bill is that ridiculous fellow, Sid Marion, aided and abetted by Madelyn Kileen. The dialectic Mr. Marion is about the closest approximation the current stage has of the late Sam Bernard and Cliff Gordon, who also could twist the English language into no semblance whatever of its former self. And, as if that were not enough, the spectacular revue is further bulwarked by the Robert Freund Gypsy Chorus in some well-sung and rousing periods of colorful vocalization and Marion Daniels, a dancer who belongs in the first flight.

Colorful background is provided by that mistress of the ballet, Jeanette Hackett and her "Twelve Dancing De Lovelies," almost a complete revue in themselves.

A new issue of the Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's orchestral contributions further augment a better than two hour diversion that may be relied upon to strike some responsive chord in practically any discriminating theatrical taste.

EDNA STILLWELL,

who serves as foil for the comedy of "Red" Skelton in several of his skits in the "Streamlined Revue," currently holding the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater. Mr. Skelton, one of the most resourceful of comedians, returns to F street after a considerable absence to renew friendships made on previous visits.

RKO-Keith's

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." What remains to be said?

Perhaps first should be remarked that this exquisite fantasy yesterday entered its fourth consecutive week on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater. That should give some inkling of its merit as a screen attraction nicely calculated to supply superlative entertainment to every age, every amusement taste and every observant spectator able to discern the beauty, the glowing imagination and the tremendously effective Technicolor treatment with which Walt Disney has imbued the first feature-length production, in cartoon form, ever to emanate from his inspired studios.

Mr. Disney has captured public fancy more than once with his short-reel creations, but never has there been anything quite like "Snow White." It strikes a new note and establishes a new standard of artistry in the fabrication of celluloid entertainment based on the drawn line instead of the personal contributions of living actors. It suffers no lack of realistic effect because it is a pencil and not a personality that one really views on the silver sheet. It is an exciting adventure in a new realm of make-believe—as new to the members of the audience as Snow White's experiences in the wilderness were new and a little startling to her.

It is no limpid little idyll that Disney has constructed through the medium of hundreds of thousands of drawn pictures in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It is an hilariously amusing, delightfully fantastic and, at times, startlingly ominous translation of a fairy-tale classic that comes to life on the screen with illuminating embellishments that no juvenile mind possibly could conjure.

Added to the fourth week's run of the bill at Keith's is a new issue of "The March of Time," compiled with the usual punctilious care always devoted to this foremost of the American documentary films of regular release. Even so, "The March of Time" must take second place to the charm and inspiriting "lift" of "Snow White."

Trio Reunited.

Akim Tamiroff, Hugh Southern and Anthony Quinn, who portrayed important roles in Cecil B. De Mille's "The Buccaneer," are together again in "Dangerous to Know," in which Tamiroff enacts the featured male role.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 4.—Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch borrowed the spotlight from her director-husband long enough to give a luncheon and baby shower for Mrs. Mervyn LeRoy.

As showers go, this one took on the aspect of a hurricane. What presents! Worth having a baby if you could get loot like that.

Joan Bennett, the envy of all, wearing fingernails so long they curled back on her at the edges. Carmen Pantages, wasting no time, applied her pail polish at the party. It was slaughter-house red.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Joan Crawford wore a brilliant blue wool dress, astrakhan jacket and huge plaid taffeta bag. She topped it all with a stove-pipe hat with tiny bows going all the way up the front, which looked just as though she'd lifted it off the kitchen range.

Irene Dunne wore a blue halo hat, sitting on the back of her head and a veil hanging down from that. Virginia Bruce in beige and a violet halo hat so—big. Mrs. Zanuck in a tan dress, wearing her new clips, ring and bracelet made of gold and cinnamon-colored diamonds in the shape of a California poppy.

All brought snazzy presents: A leather case filled with six huge bottles of perfume, dresses, coats, sheets, baby pillows, caps, sweaters and a big silver frame for baby's first picture. Nightgowns and bed jackets for mama. Four satin-covered hot-water bottles. Satin is smooth and keeps its heat. Oh yes!

Mrs. George Fitzmaurice and Mrs. Basil Rathbone, who used to be Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, became buddies, talking about houses, parties, upkeep, babies, marriages and divorces—well, you know what women talk about when they get together. What do you men talk about at lunch?

The ice cream dessert consisted of frozen babies in bed held by a stork. Sounds like Elsa Maxwell. But it was a Lubitsch touch.

All this took me back to the good old days when Mary Pickford was president of "Our Girls Club," with 22 featured women of that day. They met every Monday night. At their first party they served Eskimo pies. They didn't know about starving to keep in the limelight then.

Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Mrs. Zanuck, Mrs. Selznick, Lois Wilson, Laura LaPlante and Claire Windsor were some of the members. Their boy friends whom they've since married—and some divorced—came at 10 o'clock to take them home.

They were entertained twice at Pickfair, known as The Buckingham Palace of Hollywood. Their excitement—getting new dresses, borrowing furs and jewels to impress Mary—had most of them scared speechless when they arrived there. Mary was so exhausted putting over the party, that she took to her bed and stayed there for a week.

The second Pickfair party was even funnier. Louise Brooks, who'd just married Eddie Sutherland, hadn't been told it was a ladies' stag and took along her bridegroom. He was quickly whisked upstairs to the guest room and ate his dinner off a tray, in the very room where he had spent his wedding night with Marjorie Daw, who is now Mrs. Myron Selznick. Their marriage took place at Pickfair, Marjorie being Mary's protege. Marjorie was one of the merry-makers downstairs. After each girl had been given her quota of engagement, wedding and baby showers, the club disbanded.

* * * *

I was lucky or unlucky enough to be invited to 10 of the 22 showers given recently for our biggest star before she married. I asked one of my hostesses why I was invited to so many. She replied: "Only because you bring handsome presents, darling."

I've seriously thought of "framing" an engagement for myself to see if I could break even. I've been one of the darndest shower-going gals in this town and never got so much as a red umbrella.

But the sweetest one I ever went to was given for the late Mabel Normand, by Mrs. Abe Lehr, one of our finest women. I was proud of our Hollywood girls that night. They filled five clothes baskets to the brim for little Mabel, hoping to give her a few months' happiness before the end, which they knew was just around the corner. Her eyes so filled with tears, she couldn't read the names on the cards. Yes; sometimes Hollywood has a heart.

Metropolitan

Its essentially dramatic and historic subject-matter makes "Gold Is Where You Find It" easily eligible for a second downtown week.

Certainly the story is here! A story of ruthless exploitation versus long-range, sensible planning and land use—a story timely and important today—but it seems clumsily handled at times.

The wheat farmers of the Sacramento Valley see their rich land buried under mud washed down the mountain sides by hydraulic gold-mine machinery high above them. They seek legal aid, and when that fails, take to their guns and fight their own battles. Eventually the California Supreme Court confirms their victory and the land is saved for the amazing fruit crops it is to give to the future.

The multi-plane Technicolor process is tremendously effective and pleasing in outdoor scenes (even the mud is handsome), but a little too precious and pretty in some interiors. The flavor of the period—1860's and '70's—is suggested through stiff conversational references to "new inventions," the telephone, the electric light bulb, etc. It is interesting, informative and entertaining.

Oh, yes, Olivia DeHavilland (very, very pretty in color); Claude Rains (excellent actor always); young Tim Holt (Jack's attractive and talented son), and black-Irishman George Brent, make the story move, and focus and personalize its larger conflict into a human relationship which will make you hope a little harder that their side will win.

Sonja Henie Is Skating Again At the Palace

'Happy Landing' Reunites Olympic Ice Champion and Don Ameche.

"HAPPY LANDING." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Milton Sperling and Boris Ingster, starring Sonja Henie, with Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Ethel Merman, Jean Hersholt, Billy Gilbert, El Brendel, Marcella Corday, Eddie Conrad, Joseph Crehan and Ben Weldon. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At Loew's Palace Theater.

"Happy Landing" is made to order for the movie fans who love ice skating and the complications attendant upon the love life of a popular orchestra leader.

Sonja Henie attends to the ice skating, and she is, of course, superlative, even when surrounded by a couple of bevies of ice chorus girls.

Casar Romero is the orchestra leader, forever battling his way through hordes of adoring females, who occasionally finds time to knock off a few new ditties. Raymond Scott and divers song writers really wrote the things, but for the sake of the script, Mr. Romero gets credit.

Ethel Merman is present, in better makeup than her last screen appearance, and with all her memorable animal spirits. The lady is exuberant, irrepressible, and if the ceiling is the limit, the good rafters must often quake a bit when she tempestuously hits a high note as only Merman can. She is the most persistent pursuer of the elegant Mr. Romero, and causes much activity through her misbehaving.

So They Married.

Don Ameche (you remember him—the lad on the radio who laughs) is second fiddle and manager to the Romero person. He eventually inherits the love and tender affection of Miss Henie, when once she learns what a "heel" the fascinating Romero indeed is. Even on ice skates, young love does not run smooth, and so there are a few skittish developments before the final romantic clinch. But Sonja and Don do get married, to the delight of all the gurglers in the audience who have been telling each other for reels that Don and Sonja are so cute and so sweet.

The plot? What do you expect when you have Henie and her shining blades? It is a gently persistent little thread about how Sonja lives in far away Norway and falls in love with Romero when he falls out of the skies into the middle of her daydreams. Following a pursuit to New York, she discovers all that glitters is his flashing teeth and his real love is the sweet-shoutin' Miss Merman. Then she becomes a famous ice skater, just to spite him. So she discovers she really loves Don, who has faithfully loved her all along. So they are married. So what?

Decorating the frailty of the plot are numerous individual acts of some effectiveness, providing you do not expect them to fit into the plot. Notably, the Raymond Scott Quintet, featuring Scott's "War Dance of the Wooden Indians," which you might rank with "Power House." Miss Merman puts over several songs in her best putting-over manner, which is clamorously effective. El Brendel appears in a small bit. Billy Gilbert injects a shot of real laughter with a hamburger touch. And Miss Henie is omnipresent, in a multiplicity of neat costumes, with new and tricky twirls of her small skates.

Alfalfa Takes Rap.

Our Gang, in "Male and Female," forms a "He Man's Woman-Hater Club," with devastating results for Alfalfa, the one whose hair sticks up like that. Better catch this, as it might be the last one pal Spanky will make. He is retiring, at the ripe age of 7 or 8.

Not to be missed is a short, unique in inspiration, deft in presentation, called "Life in Sometown, U. S. A." Aimed to show the absurdity of numerous laws throughout the country, it strikes a fine moral without posing. Incidently, Buster Keaton directed it, and the job is one of which he can be proud.

In the newsreel is a clip of Gen. Pershing, which the matinee audience applauded loudly. Pete Smith's new bunch of Audioskopics, pleasantly excites everyone.

Rosemary Lane Has Odd Mishap

Rosemary Lane has satisfied her ambition to be a chimney sweep.

While working in "Golddiggers in Paris" at Warner Brothers, where she has been utilizing leisure moments doing odd jobs around the Encino home she shares with her mother and sister Priscilla, she started to put the barbecue oven in the playhouse in order, and discovered the chimney wouldn't draw.

Climbing to the roof, she found a wide chimney, and decided to investigate farther. She crawled in and when below the roof level became stuck. When her muffled cries for help were finally heard firemen had to be called to extricate her.

She indignantly refused their offer to turn a hose on her after she got out.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 4.

FOREIGN DISPATCH: The WPA Federal Theater, anxious to produce some of George Bernard Shaw's plays, contacted the Theater Guild officials, who suggested that all negotiations should be made directly with the playwright. Shaw, therefore, was approached . . . "For such a public-spirited enterprise let's eliminate all red tape," he replied. "You have my permission to produce all my plays. The only fee I want is a total of $50 a week. Don't pay me each week. Let the money accumulate until the end of the year. Then the WPA Federal Theater can pay me the entire amount—provided, of course, that America is still solvent."

* * * *

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Patricia Bird, the cigarette girl in La Conga, who quit to accept Tommy Manville's invitation to become his secretary—a position from which she resigned after one day and night—finally secured her old job at La Conga last night . . . Jesse Lasky, the movie producer, purchased some cigarettes from her and then complimented: "You're a pretty girl" . . . "Please, Mr. Lasky," Patricia pleaded. "Please don't offer me a job."

* * * *

POLITICS: Heywood Broun, who was attacked in print by Sinclair Lewis, stated last night that he will slug Lewis on sight . . . Broun's son, incidentally, attends Swarthmore, where his classmate is Catherine Scherman, daughter of the conservative head of the Book-of-the-Month Club. Catherine is one of the Left-Wing leaders at the college. And young Broun is a leader of the Right. This month Heywood will lecture at Swarthmore. His advocate will be Catherine Scherman. His chief heckler, he's been warned, will be his son.

* * * *

SHOP NOTES: Samson Raphaelson, the playwright, purchased a boat and invited his mother aboard. He showed her his officer's cap marked "Captain" and said: "Look, ma I'm a captain" . . . "Listen," Mrs. Raphaelson replied, "by me you're a captain. By you you're a captain. But by a captain—you're not a captain."

* * * *

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Libby Holman has an unusual contract of employment with the new Clifton Webb-Cole Porter show, "You Never Know" . . . Miss Holman was willing to accept the customary run-of-the-play contract, but the North Carolina officials, who control the Smith Reynolds estate, refused to permit it. A compromise was effected. The contract has one extra clause, providing that Miss Holman shall be permitted to quit upon two weeks' notice, if the officials believe that her son's welfare would be benefited thereby.

* * * *

LOCAL NEWS: Billy Rose, whose Casa Manana is Broadway's most successful night club, will open an additional night club on Labor Day . . . Peggy Fears has signed Jimmy Dunn, the screen star, for her next show . . . Wilfred Lewis, secretary to the City Housing Authority and a holdover from the Langdon W. Post regime, has submitted his resignation to the new commissioner . . . The parents of Esme O'Brien, the debutante, have granted permission for her to start a singing engagement at the new Salon Royale, after Easter . . . Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt attended the opening of "Save Me the Waltz" because her protege, Roberta Joany, has a bitrole in the 3d act. Miss Jonay appears as an old woman, and speaks but one line.

* * * *

MOVIES: Charles Lederer, who had been signed to write a scenario for Walter Wanger, suddenly resigned. Wanger finally induced him to return . . . "I'm assigning Harold Young, a swell director, to you," Wanger salved, "and so you should turn out a swell job. I want you to pay attention to Young. You're to do everything he wants you to do, even if you think it's wrong. Whatever he'll tell you will be right Understand?" . . . "I understand," Lederer replied—and again quit.

* * * *

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Maj. Rollin J. Dart, of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, rushed to the Hotel Florida's case in Madrid during the bombardment and recovered a sheaf of papers from a table. He returned them to his companion and then accompanied him to the home of Peters, the United Press correspondent in Spain . . . After they had left Maj. Dart returned to Peters' home, secured entrance and searched until he again had found the papers—this time under Peters' couch. He delivered them to his companion and they went to the apartment of Herb Matthews, of the New York Times. Again the papers were lost. A maid rescued them from the corner into which they had been thrown when the shrapnel burst . . . Once again Maj. Dart returned the papers—to Ernest Hemingway. The papers were the first draft—and only copy—of Hemingway's new play.

* * * *

Snowslide Perils Stars on Film Set

Cast and crew filming "White Banners" were endangered last week when several tons of artificial snow slid off a roof of a street set.

Claude Rains, Jackie Cooper and Fay Bainter were walking by the house from which the artificial snow fell. They were showered with gypsum but escaped the brunt of the avalanche.

Technicians said vibration of a heavy truck passing the stage probably caused the snowslide.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'How to Act on Dates?' Asks Girl of 17 Who Finds Herself Tongue-Tied With Boys.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 17 years old and a senior in high school. I am not what one would call a pretty girl but I am neat in appearance and wear conservative clothes. Here is my problem: I have accepted dates from a few boys but somehow don't seem to impress them. They never ask me out a second time. Recently I met a very attractive boy who showed quite a little interest in me. He asked me for a date for two weeks from today. I would like very much to know how to act on this date.

* * * *

My more intimate girl friends tell me I am very shy and reserved in the presence of boys. I have tried very hard to overcome this handicap but it seems quite impossible. When I am alone with a boy I suddenly find myself speechless and can think of nothing to add to the conversation. This puts me in a very embarrassing position and makes the boy feel ill at ease. This is probably why I never have a second date with a boy. I have always heard that peppy, talkative girls make the best impression on boys. Please advise me, and also tell me how to thank a boy for a date at the end of the evening.
Sincerely yours, INEXPERIENCED.

* * * *

DEAR INEXPERIENCED: Since you have two weeks in which to prepare yourself for this forthcoming, all important test-case "date," I suggest you find out, by indirect methods, all you can about the boy's background and interests—what work he does, what studies he is following (if he is still in school), what sports he participates in, who his friends are, etc. Then, retire to some quiet corner with pencil and paper and literally make a list of conversational topics to offer when you are with him. Commit them to memory. Try out, tentatively, (speaking aloud if you have sufficient privacy for such an experiment; enough privacy, that is, so that your family won't suspect you've lost your mind and taken to talking to yourself) certain lively and cheerful remarks on such-and-such a subject.

* * * *

Also, make a list of things you do, things you are interested in—books, music, ping-pong, movies, children, old ladies, bicycling, skating, tennis, or what-have-you and imagine yourself telling cheerful anecdotes about your experiences with any or all of these. Figure out what you might say, of a serious or jesting nature, on all such topics. Sit down and deliberately think out what you really do think, or believe, or know about this or that. Then, when your time comes actually to discourse, just fish down into your thought processes and bring up a flow of comment on your respective interests in turn.

* * * *

On a recent evening, I heard a man who is intensely shy by nature tell how, years ago, he discovered a technique for making conversation with persons he was meeting for the first time. He said: "When I arrived at a party, I looked around for the person who attracted me most at the moment, found a place at his or her side, and immediately launched into a discussion of some subject I was interested in. I found that if I really was interested in what I was talking about, and had something to say on the subject, the other person's interest was easily evoked. I found this a much better method for making conversation than sparring around trying to find out what the other person's interests were."

* * * *

It is my opinion that persons who consistently get tongue-tied in company are persons who are, mentally lazy; persons who really have nothing to say for the simple reason that they don't do enough reading and thinking and objective living to have anything to say. Of course, in your case, it is obvious that your tongue-paralysis is partly due to the fact that you are wondering, even before the particular "date" begins whether it is to be followed up with a repeat engagement. Don't look that far ahead. Live in moment. Also, remember that while panic is highly contagious, so is serene self-control. By losing your head, you infect your companion with panic; whereas, if you draw a deep breath and make a casual remark about almost anything on earth, your companion will automatically take comfort and new strength from your poise. It isn't necessary to chatter continuously. It is only necessary to feel, from the bottom of your heart, a friendly, even an affectionate, interest in your companion of the moment. It is what you feel, more than how you act or what you say, that draws others to you or repels them.

* * * *

Incidentally, a girl should never "thank a boy for a date at the end of the evening." Rather, he thanks her for having done him the honor of accepting his invitation. However, throughout the evening, she should make it evident that she is enjoying herself enormously; and at the end of the evening, she may very properly give voice to her enjoyment. She may say, "Thank you for a lovely evening. I haven't had such a good time in ages," if her conduct has been such as to make the remark seem sincere. However, if she and her companion have been miserably tongue-tied and uneasily self-conscious all evening, such a remark would sound like ridicule. In the latter event, she might better say quite frankly, "Darn it all, I wish I wern't so cussed tongue-tied that I spoil everybody's evenings, my own particularly. What do you think I ought to do—go jump in the lake and end it all?" Whatever you do or say—be natural. Nothing is so painful to the beholder as discernible affectation. M. H.

Timely Suggestions on Making Spring Clothes

Select Pattern and Then Material, Advises This Expert.

New Colors Are Vibrant, With Pastels Taking Second Place.

By Ethel Ehlen
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU ARE among the numerous women who are trying their hands at sewing this spring here are some timely suggestions, as given by a representative of the Butterick Pattern Co., who is at a local store.

First select your pattern and then the material, instead of the other way around, which is the usual procedure. Second, the wise shopper knows that the new colors in cottons and linens are vibrant, with pastels taking second place. Third, it is considered chic to trim these smartly simple costumes with novelty buttons and suede belts. Fourth, many one-piece frocks for street wear, or sun-back models flaunt bolerós of the same or contrasting materials.

Viewing the spring and summer cotton and linen collections, one is impressed by the clever designs this year, and particularly by the lovely new colors. Another practical feature is that these materials are said to be really crease-resistant and color-fast—items which help to keep summer clothes fresh and smart looking throughout the season. In the extensive color chart the "sun" and "earth" colors lead, sharing popularity equally with such tones as baked earth, a lovely green-blue, and a new subtle green, much to the fore.

Interesting new designs include the striking Schiaparelli feather pattern, Heim's stripes, clever Mexican prints, Heim's bound sheaf (smart in black and white), Schiaparelli's star and crossed glove designs, unusual flower patterns in equally distinctive color combinations and totem pole prints. According to this Butterick representative the new paper patterns for home sewing are adjustable to all types of figures and come in sizes from 12 to 52. That is, new and smart stylings have been adapted to the older and plump figures, and are not only for slim, youthful silhouettes.

These attractive and smart cottons and linens are being fashioned into evening clothes as well as daytime, sports and beach costumes. Stripes and flower patterns make charming dinner and evening ensembles—when jackets top the evening dress it is usually of self-material, in either bolero or the longer and fitted stylings. One outstanding print in this classification is Ottoman cord in a deep wine shade sprinkled with huge flowers in coral, white and blue. A less sophisticated medium for summer evening gowns is crossbarred dimity; various color combinations on white background.

Schiaparelli's feather print, available in a number of effective color combinations, shown here in a frock of ever-fast linen, noted for smart simplicity. The fabric is especially attractive in either Mediterranean blue or baked earth with white feather design. This print, like the majority of patterns this season, is adaptable to figures of all types—it is all done in the clever spacing of the design.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

How to Care for Feet.

These raw spring days those people who do not have a particularly good circulation in the feet are liable to suffer from the after-effects of winter. Especially is this true of middle-aged people who have diabetes.

A successful method of preventing foot trouble of this character is as follows:

1. Care of Feet.

(a) The feet should be soaked in a basin of warm, soapy water for five minutes every day.

(b) They should be dried thoroughly with a Turkish towel. Be careful to dry in between the toes.

(c) They should be massaged with a little alcohol.

(d) They should be massaged with lanolin, especially the soles of the feet where there are calluses, and the heels. In this way the calluses are softened and will eventually rub off.

2. Foot Exercises.

(a) Sitting on the edge of the bed, point the toes upward and then downward. Repeat this ten times.

(b) Then make a complete circle with the foot ten times.

(c) Then raise both legs to an angle of 45 degrees. As a support for the legs, the patient may place a chair upside down on the bed. Leave them in this position for three minutes.

(d) Then let them hang down over the side of the bed again for three minutes.

(e) Then place them flat on the bed for three minutes. Cover with blanket.

These exercises should be repeated six times. They should be done daily, and if the feet have a tendency to coldness, they should be done twice a day.

On calls to the doctor the feet should be soaked for five minutes in warm, soapy water, thoroughly dried, and the toenails cut. Non-infected calluses should be soaked daily and massaged with lanolin. If there is accumulated serum under a plaque of callus, the plaque should be dissected away to remove pressure and an antiseptic dressing applied. The patient then soaks the feet several times daily and applies a clean, wet dressing. In mild cases of ingrowing toenail in which the nail is inverted, the edges should be raised with an orange stick and small pieces of cotton inserted beneath to prevent further inversion. In more severe types a triangular section of the side of the affected nail is removed.

For Tired Legs.

Ann Rutherford, movie actress, recommends the following for tired foot and leg muscles.

Lie flat on the floor with legs together and stretch the toes as far as possible toward the floor, keeping the heels down. Doing this for ten minutes, alternating left and right foot, relaxes tired tendons and strengthens the foot arch, as well as beautifying both legs and feet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 5.

OF ALL THE women in our territory who turn an honest penny in strange fields of activity, there's none much more colorful than the one known as Mme. Bey, who operates a training camp for the sturdy young men who practice the profession of flattening noses and mangling ears.

Her rural salon de swat lies over the river in nearby Jersey, and most of the noted ALICE HUGHES pugilists of the last two decades have eaten her elegant cooking and thrown their punches in the ring in "Madame's" back yard. They are all her "dear boys, from little brown lads like Sixto Escobar to muscle-bound titans such as Primo Carnera, or the "Ambling Alp." Madame feeds 'em up, sees them sharpen their murderous weapons and go forth to battle—and sometimes fall.

Her name, of course, really means nothing, for "Bey" is actually a title of rank in Turkey. In gaudier times she was the wife of one Sidky Bey, who was an attache of the Turkish Legation in Washington, and Madame still speaks nostalgically of the days when "we were friends of the President, William McKinley. How well we knew his family!" Later the couple tried a fling at Gotham society, missed fire and turned to rug-selling, with disastrous results. With cash lacking, Sidky Bey receded into the background, while Madame took over the failing training camp of the British Mr. Freddy Welsh and has since run it with conspicuous success for scores of her "dear boys." Among her latest proteges is Mr. Tommy Farr, of Wales, who rehearses his fisticuffs at her home.

A large, warm-hearted creature is the Madame. Fighters thrive on her hope and good grub, relish her sympathy and appreciate her tears when they are thumped unconscious. Yes, a colorful and even great figure is Madame Bey, living on memories of golden days in Washington and on the proceeds of the pug-factory in the Jersey hills above the old Passaic Valley!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As you know, cafe-singing by socialites here has become a major industry, which was started by Evie Symington, still the cream of the crop. Recently we have been enjoying one from out of town—the very attractive Sally Evans, of Washington, young widow of Col. Paul Evans, U. S. A., who warbles to support herself and two little children.

My young Martin is doing ten days on bread and water. Inflamed by a hot argument with his best boy friend, "Punch" Partridge, over the Teutonic march on Austria, Martin found his logic slipping and cracked "Punch" over the eye, drawing a drop of blood. This caused a great scandal in Gramercy Park, and Martin is now doing time in the cooler both to punish him and to save him from mob violence by "Punch's" other pals. Blood runs hot in Gramercy Park!

Our famous young racket-smasher, District Attorney Tom Dewey, has appointed a very pretty girl named Florence Kelley as one of his aides in the purification of our evil city. Many of our worst boys have run away from Tom, but there are still a few vicious varmints at large here, and Tom is arter 'em, fang and claw!

Bright Colors Tried For Spring Effects

Paris (U.P.).—Color combinations are being put through the test-tubes by leading designers to strike a good opening lead for this year. Schiaparelli has achieved a startling effect with especially dyed variations of red.

There are new polkadots, each dot a vibrant color. Stripes and plaids altering between sullen and angry shades of red, purple, yellow and green soon may be high fashion for both evening and sports wear.

Bright citrus-yellow with amber-gold is amazingly effective in woolen suits. New beige with mud-brown and sky-blue with turquoise combination suggest a possible trend to one color with its opposite shades for spring. On the other hand, there was a stunning sketch illustrating a rich purple and green formal to be worn with the latest wonder of wonders—a large yellow hat trimmed with purple and green ostrich feathers.

Flowing mousseline de soie scarfs of deep red, blue and yellow are colorful additions to day and evening ensembles. Draped as hats, they gaily top off your beach costumes. Tied carelessly at the waist of ankle-length ermine or silver-fox wrap around evening cloak, they set off the superb lines of the furs. Attached at the throat of a high-necked cocktail dress and allowed to flow to the hem, they give a sophisticated, thoroughly Parisian air.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

'The Good Fight.'

LOUISA M. ALCOTT, who will have been dead just 50 years ago tomorrow, is having a revival of interest through a recently published biography by Katherine Anthony. This story of the creator of "Little Women" depicts a life of struggle and sorrow. She whose writings have now delighted the children of seven decades was herself constantly shadowed by ill health and poverty She was the typically tragic spinster of American life—a frail woman with the milestone of a dependent family about her neck.

Similar strains of handicap have run through the lives of many women who have achieved literary distinction. Charlotte and Emily Bronte, both of whom were fragile in constitution, lived and worked in bleak and oppressive family surroundings. Emily died in her youth; Charlotte, at 39. Jane Austen, though economically secure, was swallowed up in family atmosphere and is said to have done most of her writing in the family sitting room. Never strong, she died at 42.

George Eliot, during her earlier years was tied to the care of an invalid father and in her later ones was constantly heckled by Mrs. Grundy. Everyone is acquainted with Elizabeth Barrett Browning's struggle against sickness and a tyrranical father. And Katherine Mansfield, in her short and shining life, made one of the most gallant fights in the annals of womanhood against ill-health and an intermittently prowling wolf at the door.

In fact, most women of all estate who find the going hard, will recognize in their own lives many of the recurring handicaps Louisa M. Alcott faced. Always, she was just getting ready to live a little easier and always her visionary father was losing his means of livelihood, or someone was getting sick, or a sister's husband was dying or a relative's child had to be helped. So she would buckle down and go at it again.

Many a time, like many a woman, she must have thought "I can't go on." But she always did. Only when she was stricken on the day her father died after his last long illnes did she quit. Her job was finished. She died two days later.

To all youth she left a legacy of literature. To all women she left a legacy of spirit—the inspiration to carry on.

The Perennial Age.

MISS OLLIE A. RANDALL, New York social worker, who is helping in a study of employed women's problems being made by the American Woman's Association, reports that the hazardous employment age for women has dropped from 40 to 35 years. She says that in some classes of work, such as secretarial, 28 years is "the absolute top with personnel directors."

However, don't be discouraged, girls—yet. Mrs. Hortense Aaronson, copyright for Vogue, recently gave Hunter College girls this advice on job-seeking and job-holding: "Stay under 30 as long as you can, and never get over 40."

So, with Mrs. Aaronson's permission, we will change the 40 to 34 and everything will be rosy.

MABEL DODGE LUHAN, author and former socialite, who, with her Indian husband, Tony, recently returned to New York from her Arizona abode, to establish a part-time salon, says the present generation cannot solve its problems because it is "always rushing somewhere." The solution, she says, would be to sit in the sun in the desert—or for that matter any place—and think. In fact, if you just sit and don't even bother about thinking, she says, the answers will come to you.

That sounds easy. Yet we have the classic example of the old man who said, "Me and my wife we just set and think—and sometimes we just set." Probably it all depends on who does the "setting!"

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Exercises Can Make Bust Youthful and Waist Tapering.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE CURRENT ideal in figures is normal weight with a firm, youthful bust contour, a tapering waist and a slight outcurve of the hips. Since this is the normal figure, this ideal is within the reach of anyone who is willing to work for it. Some, of course, have to work harder than others.

Todays' group of exercises is designed to remold the figure by correcting or improving the three major measurements. They lift the line of the bust, slim the waist and smooth the hipline.

Begin with the following exercise for the bust:

POSITION: Stand with feet apart, arms stretched straight out from the sides, shoulder-level. Hold the body perfectly still, tightening all the groin muscles.

MOVEMENT: Without lowering the arms and without moving the hips, move the entire torso to the right, back to first position; and then to the left. Perform very slowly and concentrate just as much on holding the hips still as in moving the trunk.

Like Balinese Dance.

This exercise is very similar to a dance form favored by Balinese dancers. It is difficult to perform and at first you will not be able to move very far to left or right. If you perform the exercise correctly, however, you will soon become more flexible and the range of movement will be increased. It is a splendid exercise for the muscles supporting the breasts.

Besides improving the bust contour, the next exercise fills in those unlovely hollows at the base of the throat.

POSITION: Standing in an erect posture, arms extended in front of the body shoulder width apart, palms down, and hands gripping small objects of equal weight, such as dumbbells.

MOVEMENT: Gripping and reaching forward with the arms, lower the right arm about 2½ feet. As you begin to raise the right arm again to shoulder level, lower the left arm. Repeat 12 times. Do not allow the shoulders to go forward, but remember that the value of this exercise is in the grip and forward reach.

Exercise for Hipline.

This exercise for the hipline is a great help to your figure:

POSITION: Lie on the stomach on the floor, arms stretching straight ahead on floor and legs extended straight down. Keep the knees straight.

The value of this exercise is in the grip and forward reach.

MOVEMENT: Holding the knees as straight as possible, raise the right leg in a high backward swing. Now the left leg! Keep trying to kick a little higher each time. Begin with 20 kicks and gradually increase to 50.

And what about the waistline? Stand with feet slightly apart, arms stretched high overhead and hands clasped, and use that stubborn measurement as a pivot. Try to hold the hips still and swing the trunk in a wide circle. There, see what I mean?

Entire Cabinet Honors Roosevelts at Dinner

Helen Jepson Entertains Guests in Place of Lucrezia Bori; Terrapin Included on Simple Menu to Please President.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

For the second time this season the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner dined out last evening. In fact, every member of the President's official family was on hand for the Cabinet's annual dinner to the Chief Executive and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

HOPE R. MILLER.

During this Administration it has been the custom of Cabinet members to fete the President at a single function, rather than separate dinners at which each member of the Cabinet acted as host. March 4 has been chosen as the date of the event each season except last, when the dinner was advanced one day in order not to conflict with the Victory dinner.

The Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel was the scene of last night's event, which was followed by a concert in the grand ballroom. Queen Mary roses in a salmon shade were combined with white lilacs to decorate the table centerpiece. The latter was fashioned with a tall vase and four gold baskets on a mirrored plaque entwined with smilax. The seal of the President of the United States in spun sugar was used in the dcorative scheme; also, a spun sugar loving cup in the form of a blue tulip bearing on its various petals a photograph of the White House, the President's seal and the seal of the United States. A bouquet of violets for the women and a white gardenia boutonniere for the gentlemen were at each plate. Palms and ferns were used in profusion to decorate the two rooms.

Jepson Replaces Bori for Concert

The concert following the dinner was given by Miss Helen Jepson, of the Metropolitan Opera, who was chosen by Lucrezia Bori to take her place on the program. Illness prevented Miss Bori's coming to the Capital. Robert Wallenborn accompanied Miss Jepson.

The Cabinet hostesses, who planned the dinner decided on a comparatively simple menu, but included terrapin as a special feature because the President is so fond of it. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing a white gown shot with gold and an ermine trimmed jacket, sat beside the President; Mrs. Roosevelt, gowned in black velvet, was at the right of the Secretary of State. Other guests included the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.; the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, she in a frock of red taffeta made with a bouffant skirt and trimmed with bands of shirred velvet; the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the latter wearing the handsome silver-trimmed red gown in which she was presented to the Court of St. James's.

Also, the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, who returned to the Capital from Florida especially to attend the dinner; the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, the latter in a black sequin gown; the Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, she in white satin; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the latter in a frock of blue and silver lame with a bodice embroidered in rhinestones, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkens.

Mrs. Stanley Mortimer Among Dinner Guests

In addition to members of the Cabinet and their wives, there were several other guests. Mrs. Roosevelt's aunt, Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, of New York, who is visiting at the White House, was present. She will remain in Washington until tomorrow and will attend the Women's National Press Club dinner and stunt partly this evening.

Also present were Mrs. James Roosevelt, daughter-in-law of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt; Mrs. George H. Dern, Col. and Mrs. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Early, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Walker, Mrs. Louis McHenry Howe, Frederic A. Delano, the President's uncle; Miss Marguerite LeHand, Mrs. James M. Helm, and Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider.

Royalty's Call Only an Item to Mrs. Roosevelt

Rush for Lecture Tour Is Punctuated by Other Engagements.

Receiving the three Albanian princesses, the Albanian Minister, Faik Konitza, and two aides, Abdurahman Salih and Asin Jakova, was only one item on Mrs. Roosevelt's full schedule yesterday.

Her press conference in the morning was followed by a luncheon at which one of the special guests was Mrs. Madeleine Z. Doty, director of the foreign study bureau in Switzerland. Last-minute preparations for her lecture tour occupied most of her time from the close of the luncheon until the princesses arrived.

Asked at her press conference if she would shake hands with the royal trio, she replied that she would unless she was "told not to," and added that the only time she was asked ahead of time to do otherwise was several years ago, when a gentleman called who preferred not to shake hands with Christians.

The subject turned to her recent voice lessons, and Mrs. Roosevelt averred that she had always felt she needed voice training, but had never before found time for it. The study, she implied, was not special preparation for the lecture tour, which starts in Texas Monday. A visit to Seattle and a short sojourn at Warm Springs are on her schedule before her return to Washington April 3.

The bouquet of 5,000 blossoms planned for presentation to her when she arrives at Amarillo will not be given to her if Amarillo officials follow her request. She has asked by wire that the flowers, or the funds for them, be given to charity instead.

He is a member of the Union League Club of Chicago and the inventor of the teletype machine.

The guests at the dinner included Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Guy M. The bride is the former Miss Margaret Ransom Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Chapman, of Silver Spring, Md., and Mr. Adams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Adams, of Burtonsville.

The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Universalist Church in Washington, the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown which had belonged to her grandmother, trimmed with tulle. Her old lace veil, which came originally from India and belonged to her great-great-grandmother, was watta ched to a halo of rose point lace held in place by a circlet of pearls. She carried white roses.

She carried an old fashioned bouquet of spring flowers. Clark Adams was best man, and the ushers were Howard Ludwig, Albert Childs, Caesar Doone, and Charles Chapman, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony a supper was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The La Gardes Obtain Estate

Maj. and Mrs. Richard D. LaGarde have decided to abandon city life for country residence—and have purchased a handsome old place between Potomac and Rockville, Md. They will move there from their Belmont road residence when spring is rather far advanced.

Originally the property of Miss Mary Bradley, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Bradley, the estate comprises almost 200 acres and an old brick house which Maj. LaGarde is in the process of remodeling. The LaGardes have discovered several old papers in the boards of the house, one a memorandum about the sale of some ribbon, and a leghorn hat. This paper is signed by a Clagett, one of Maryland's oldest families, but the date on the paper has been chewed off by rats.

With Rockville and Bethesda the nearest "ports of call" in case of fire, Maj. LaGarde has already installed a tank large enough to hold water to extinguish a sizable blaze.

Mme. Spiridovitch has sung before nearly all the "crowned heads" of Europe. She composed the "Hymn to Majesty" which was used during the coronation ceremonies last spring. About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

FAIK KONITZA, Albanian Minister, is fast losing patience with American ignorance as to the proper attitude toward royalty.

The other day a representative of the press telephoned him and said, "When are the Zog girls coming to town, Mr. Minister?"

DUDLEY HARMON.

"Madam," he replied, in exasperated tones, "don't you know princesses are not referred to in such terms?"

"IT'S TAKEN my friends all their lives to learn how to play bridge correctly with four suits; how on earth could anybody ever learn all over again with five? demanded Mme. Simoupolos yesterday. The visiting bridge wizard, wife of the former Greek Minister here, was asked what she thought of Elsa Maxwell's latest game. Incidentally, this new wrinkle seems to have created quite a fuss in London, where M. Simoupolos is Minister, but his wife had nothing to do with launching it in the British capital.

"I didn't come to Washington to play bridge," the visitor emphasized yesterday. As a matter of fact, hospitable as Americans are to foreigners, only a woman of unusual personality could be as widely feted as is Mme. Simoupolos during her stay here. With luncheons, teas and dinners scheduled for every day of her visit, there is little time left over for her favorite game.

• • • •

TODAY MME. SIMOUPOLOS will be honor guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. George Marye, and tonight will attend the stunt party of the Women's National Press Club. On Monday she will lunch with Mrs. James Clement Dunn, and that evening will dine with the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom. Wednesday will find her driving out Mrs. Cahrles Carroll Glover's home for lunch, and the following evening she will dine with the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims. She will be a guest at a luncheon to be given Friday by Mrs. William McKee Dunn; at a dinner that evening, when Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett will be hosts, and Saturday will go to the Argentine Embassy for a luncheon to be given by the Ambassador and Senora de Espil.

After all this gaiety is over, Mme. Simoupolos will go to New York, where she will remain four or five days before returning to London.

NOT A SINGLE Junior Leaguer will be represented in the third annual Washington photographic show scheduled to open tomorrow afternoon at the Junior League Gallery, 2001 Massachusetts avenue. Since the exhibits were started under the auspices of this group, some of the members have always been represented, but this year they either weren't interested or couldn't make the grade.

One of the league's leading camera experts, Mrs. David Karrick, returned to Washington too late to enter anything in the the show. She got back only a day or so ago from a trip to Egypt with her husband. Marvin Breckinridge, former resident who has gone in for photography in a big way in New York, sent down several entries, but is not included in the list of exhibitors.

Chairman of the committee arranging for the show is Mrs. Atherton Macondray, of Alexandria. Judges include Prentiss Taylor, Allen Whiting and Baroness Serge Korff, the former Alice Graeme.

Miss Barbara Wright, who combines photography with traveling and writing, will be represented in the exhibit by a portrait of a Finnish woman working in the field.

Miss Hardesty Becomes Bride

Miss Kathryn Hardesty, of Washington, yesterday became the bride of Eugene Bernard Magruder, of Alta Vista, Md., at a wedding which took place at the home of the bride's maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Berens, on California street. The ceremony, performed by the Rev. Edward Wilcox, was solemnized at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Hardesty is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Martin Thomas Hardesty, of Kentucky, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Magruder, of Alta Vista.

Given in marriage by Judge G. I. Iverson, of Utah, the bride wore a street-length gown of dusty pink lace and a hat to match. The dress was fashioned with a close-fitting bodice and a full skirt. Her accessories were of a strawberry shade and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Berens, her maid of honor and only attendant, was attired in beige lace with which she wore rust accessories and a hat of rust. Her flowers were Talisman roses. John McGinnis served as best man, while the ushers included Thomas Magruder, brother of the bridegroom. Fred Boothby and Andrew Huntress.

At the reception which followed the ceremony and which also took place at Miss Berens' home, the mother of the bridegroom and Mrs. Boothby assisted the bridal party in receiving guests.

The couple left for a motor tour through the south. They will make their residence in Washington at the Cavalier Apartments.

The former Miss Hardesty is a graduate of Holy Cross Academy.

Rest Just as Important As Exercise, Writer Says

Author of 'Your Figure Madame,' Visitor Here, Tells Home Economics Group Women Need a Free Hour Daily.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The business woman must plan her beauty program on the same efficient basis that she plans her business, Ida Jean Kain, author of the column, "Your Figure Madame," last night told members of the District of Columbia Section of National Home Economics Women in Business, at their dinner at the Iron Gate Inn.

"It is essential that the woman in business keep young and be good looking and yet she has little time to herself and works hard," said Miss Kain. "As important to the business woman as exercise is relaxation. With an hour to herself each day, she can keep herself young and beautiful."

She recommended a 15-minute walk, followed by 15 minutes of gymnastics and a 30-minute rest, completely relaxed. "This program at the end of a busy day will pick you up better than a cocktail and will never let you down," she said.

"Silver Threads" Not Only Signs of Age

Every woman after 30 must watch her figure, said Miss Kain. "Even though there may be no silver threads in the blonde hair, there are places that date your birthday. I knew a man who could look under the chin and tell the age to a split second. Dresser tops should be mirrors.

"The next place that shows signs of age is the back of the neck, where a cushion of fat develops. Another—usually entirely overlooked—is the back of the upper arm, which becomes flabby unless exercised.

"To keep your figure young, you must exercise parts which lose tone. To avoid a 'chin' and dowager's hump, just hold your head up."

There was a noticeable straightening up and lifting of chins among the dinner guests as Miss Kain talked. She herself was a trim example of the results of the program she outlined. She wore a "streamlined" black Alex jersey frock, with moonstone accessories, and there were no telltale wrinkles under her eyes or under her chin.

"The waistline, which is one of the chief worries of most people, may have three additional inches added to those it measured when you were a girl. Three inches aren't serious but more than that are," she asserted.

She recommended for slimming the waistline, at the rate of an inch in two weeks, systematic twisting, stretching and bending exercises. For the hips she advised rolling and swings the legs backward to an angle of 45 degrees.

For the upper arm, she suggested "either the washboard or the punching bag." Exercises for keeping those muscles firm must be done with a thrust behind them or at shoulder level, she said.

Cooks Need Not Be Streamlined

She offered a word of comfort to the dietitians in her audience who may have been worrying over the addition of a few extra pounds. "Dieticians are all marvelous cooks and they are privileged to be 10 per cent overweight. We don't expect to have streamlined cooks," she said, and then gave weights and measurements for those who wanted to look to their diet and their exercise and "be every inch a lady."

Miss Kain was introduced by Mrs. Faith Rasmussen, chairman of the District of Columbia Section of the National Home Economics Women in Business. Mrs. Rasmussen is national home economics director for the International Ice Association.

Miss Elva Tyler, of Woodward and Lothrop Tea Room, is secretary and treasurer; Ann Sullivan Hagen is program chairman, and Miss Jean Green, Food Editor of The Washington Post, is scribe of the organization.

Guests of honor last night in addition to the speaker were Miss Mary Mason, of the WRC Home Forum Hour; Miss Malvina Lindsay, Woman's Page Editor of The Post; Miss Eva Marks, president of the Dietetic Association, and Miss Ruth Sheldon, president of the District Home Economics Association.

Miss Kain is here from New York City for the week-end, having come to Washington to attend the annual stunt party of the Women's National Press Club.

Phi Mu Sorority Marks 86 Years

Two Active Chapters, Alumnae Group Join at Dinner on Anniversary.

Members of Phi Mu Sorority last night observed the eighty-sixth anniversary of the organization at their annual founders' day banquet held at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Beta Alpha Chapter, of George Washington University; Gamma Delta Chapter, of American University, and the Alumnae Chapter joined in the celebration.

Mrs. J. Foster Hagan, of the Alumnae Chapter, presided as toastmaster and presented scholarship awards to members of the active chapters who led in scholastic standing. Miss Clara Hall was awarded the cup for Beta Alpha Chapter and Miss Carol Laise that for Gamma Delta. Miss Laise also won the cup last year, but the honor of receiving it two years in succession is not unusual, as some members of the chapter in the past have held it four successive seasons. Miss Catherine Bowen was awarded a bracelet given the pledge of Beta Alpha Chapter with the highest standing to her credit.

Preceding the banquet, a service in memory of the three founders of the sorority was held, as is the custom, including the contribution by each member of a penny for each year of the sorority's life. With 91 persons present and 86 years to be accounted for, a substantial sum was added to the scholarship fund as the roll was called. Founders of Phi Mu were Mary Dupont Lines, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mary Myrick Daniels, of Americus, Ga., and Martha Hardaway Kedding, of Macon Ga., who started it at Wesleyan College in Macon.

Mrs. Joseph Roney is acting president of the Alumnae Chapter here; Miss Mary Martin heads the chapter at George Washington, and Miss Ruth Humphreys that at American.

Authors Attend Play Program Of Pen Women

Dr. Maddox, Mmes. Anderson, Kahn in Premiere Audience.

Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Florence Kahn and Dr. Emily Maddox were among those in the audience last night at the Grafton Hotel studio of the District of Columbia branch of the League of American Pen Women, to see the premiere of their one-act plays in the Laboratory Little Theater.

Mrs. Anderson had sent a profusion of flowers to decorate the studio for the performance and both she and Dr. Maddox had also sent flowers to the women members of the casts in the plays of their authorship. Mrs. Kahn's play, "Duet in Manhattan," had but two characters, both men. Ben Smart, of the Arts Club, played the lead with Larry Lawrence in the role of his brother. The piece was given between the other two and was considered probably the most dramatic of the group.

Elaborate costuming characterized "The Bridge of Rama," written by Mrs. Anderson, and the musical settings had been arranged by Miss Ida Hoyt Chamberlain, who played the drum, cymbals and bells.

Mrs. Kahn was accompanied to the plays by a group of friends from her home in Baltimore and entertained them at dinner with members of the cast of her "This Is Drama" preceding the performance. It dealt with the difficulties of a young playwright stifled by his efforts to write in a one-room apartment.

Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the District branch of the Pen Women, welcomed the guests as they arrived and introduced Mrs. Rose Robinson Cohen, who organized the Laboratory Little Theater three years ago. Dr. Maddox was one of the winners of the play contest the first year as well as this season, and Mrs. Anderson was among the winners last year as well as this. Eight plays have been tested since the Laboratory Theater was started.

Following the plays last night they were discussed in a critique by Arthur Behrens, director of drama at Georgetown University, and Ralph Williams, director of drama and of the Footlights Club of the University of Maryland.

Lewis Lofton Moneyway, president of the Arts Club, was among those in the audience, as were several members of the board of governors of the Pen Women, Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch and Mrs. Helen Orr Watson.

This morning, at 9:30, the Pen Women will provide the program for the Civil Forum over Station WJSV, on which Miss Chamberlain, as chairman of music for the branch, will speak. She will be assisted in her program by H. Vincent Meakin, barytone, who will sing one of her compositions.

Woman's Church Council Marks World Prayer Day for Missions

Dr. Blackwelder Asserts That the World Is Exhausting Its Resources of Materialism; Representatives of Different Denominations Take Part.

Members of the Womans Council of the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday morning gathered at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation for observance of the annual World Day of Prayer for home and foreign missions. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, introduced the speaker, Dr. F. Oscar Blackwelder.

The service was carried out without interruption by announcement of names of those participating. Representatives of the various denominations, rising in their turn on the program, offered prayers. Some were seated with the presiding offer on the rostrum and others were scattered through the congregation.

In his sermon, Dr. Blackwelder declared that the world is exhausting its resources of materialism. A new economic order is inevitable, he said, and this must be based on a new sociological order which, in turn, must find its basis in a philosophical order and this, to be successful, must have its foundation in Christ's teachings.

Dr. Blackwelder also asserted that acquisition of power is dangerous and self-destructive to the person who exerts it unless accompanied by a sense of responsibility to his fellow man and accountability to God. His subject was "The Gospel for a Groping World."

Among church women who participated in the program were Mrs. C. C. Hung, wife of the minister of the Chinese Church; Mrs. O. B. Atwood, of the National City Christian Church; Mrs. William S. Abernathy and Mrs. George A. Ross, of Calvary Baptist Church; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, of Foundry Methodist; Mrs. H. E. Beatty, of Georgetown Lutheran; Mrs. R. W. Brooks, Mrs. G. E. D. Townsend, of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal South; Mrs. Frank Edgington, of New York Avenue Presbyterian; Mrs. T. E. Robertson, of All Souls Episcopal; Dr. Mary E. Markley, Dr. Anne Seesholtz and Mrs. W. L. Darby, of New York Avenue Presbyterian. Mrs. Darby is the wife of the excutive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Thursday evening, Mrs. Inzel spoke on a radio program explaining the purpose of the day of prayer and its origin, and Mrs. Helen Turley sang "What Peace Have They That Love Thy Law." The day of prayer custom was begun in 1887 by the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. In 1917 it was adopted for foreign missions and, in 1927, inaugurated as a world day of prayer for all missions. Protestant denominations in all nations observe it, making the devotional services extend throughout the 24 hours.

A similar service to that in Washington was conducted by the churches of Takoma Park at 2 o'clock at the Presbyterian Church there. Mrs. Lindley H. Dennis was chairman, assisted by presidents of missionary societies. Mrs. C. E. Walter, of the Christian Church, presided, and Mrs. D. C. Jackson was at the organ. Mrs. Hung, of the Chinese Church, went from the Washington service to speak at the Takoma Park meeting.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, March 5.

It isn't fair to assume that harsh wardens denied the high-strung Al Capone all the niceties of life in prison, and thus brought on his nervous breakdown; a convict writes me to correct this misapprehension.

• • • •

Actually, plaster casts of Capone's tender feet were sent to the prison shoe shop at Leavenworth, from which shoes were made to measure for Al, presumably with fawn cloth tops and buttons.

• • • •

Some of the awestruck patriots who go to White House receptions to shake the President's hand are caught off guard, when, thrusting for a hearty handshake, they clutch only Mr. Roosevelt's bunched fingers up to the knuckles, beyond which his thumb protects his hand from the hearty bone-crushers.

Duchess Wally. . . . haughty kin.

Perhaps it's just my imagination, but I fancied there was on Mr. Roosevelt's face a faint relish of the handshaker's astonishment.

• • • •

In celebration of the New Deal's fifth anniversary on March 4, President Roosevelt held the longest press conference of the season—37 minutes. His theme was objectives and methods. This time he refrained from his usual acid compliments to those "liberals" who like his goals but criticize his methods . . . (In a mellow mood, he felt reasonable trial and error progress is being made . . .) As a sideline he urged the 15th Psalm as a timely front page story, and one nervy scribe asked him if it should be by-lined "By Franklin D. Roosevelt." Best thought: When the Ship of State swerves a little to keep on its course, some people think the Administration is changing directions.

• • • •

". . . for Capone's delicate dogs."

Hospitality in the Capital isn't just a gesture with potato chips; a Cabinet hostess confides that for her last "at home" she had in readiness 1,200 sandwiches (paper-thin, of course), 800 small cakes (what we call cookies out in the hinterland) and 25 gallons of tea and coffee, not to mention incidental bonbons and other victuals.

• • • •

GILT OFF THE DOME: Pillow covers are changed daily on the couch pillows in the holy-of-holies clubroom behind the Senate, where Senators may stretch out for a nap . . . Once upon a time the Senate adopted a resolution that bean soup be kept on the Senate restaurant menu constantly; and since then it has been; the thickest soup in the world, suh.

• • • •

One thing that bothers the Senate's statesmen is the rumor (never forget Washington's keen sense of rumor) that President Roosevelt has been exchanging letters with at least one foreign statesman, quietly and informally.

• • • •

Quite a few of the Duchess Wally's relatives, near and distant, live in Washington's far-flung suburbs or the adjacent countryside in the hunting counties. . . Some of them have adopted an attitude of hauteur when discussing the Duchess, as if she had done something outre (or at least bizarre) by marrying an ex-king.

• • • •

However, it is noticeable that when they receive a card from her at holidays, birthdays or anniversaries (which she remembers conscientiously) they are apt to carry it in reticule or wallet until it is well-frayed, showing it without too much urging.

". . . Wally's kin are haughty."

More inside stuff about the Panay bombing is coming to light since survivors have returned to Washington . . . For example, when they were hiding in the reeds on the Yangtze shore, they were afraid for a time to display their American flag, taken off the boat, or signal for help, lest they be slaughtered to erase any vestige of the incident. They were still uncertain whether war had been declared.

• • • •

As he was driving along a fashionable Washington street, a diplomat became annoyed because a driver behind him was honking . . .

"I will not be honked at!" he exclaimed, and declined to swerve aside . . . The next moment the other car sideswiped him and bashed in his fender and running board.

• • • •

POTSHOTS AT BIG SHOTS: Two of Senator Guffey's big parties this year have been (by way of contrast) for CIO Chief John L. Lewis and for gilt-edged Tony Biddle, our Ambassador to Poland . . . A party for "little businessmen" seems in order . . . Diplomats with DPL auto license tags can do anything they like in Washington traffic with complete impunity—park near water plugs, drive on the left, or exceed the speed limit. Police do not molest them—they enjoy diplomatic immunity.

Copeland Set To End Sanity Trials by Jury

Promises Report on King Bill as First Step in D. C. Plan.

By Gerald G. Gross

Abolition of the mandatory jury trial for admittance to St. Elizabeth's Hospital may be the first step in execution of the six-year District public health plan recommended by Surgeon General Thomas Parran, The Post learned last night.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate District Subcommittee considering a bill to change the present "inhumane" and "archaic" commitment system, said he expects to report the measure favorably next week.

"I have asked Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal to summarize criticisms of the bill and report to me in the next few days," Copeland declared.

Doctors' Ideas Weighed.

Introduced last year by Chairman William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, of the Senate District Committee, the proposed legislation substitutes a mental health commission for the lay jury in Criminal Court which now determines whether psychopathic cases are "sane" or "insane."

However, to protect the individual's constitutional rights, a jury trial is provided if the patient or his relatives demand one. The commission, comprising one lawyer and eight physicians trained in psychiatry, would make its recommendations to District Court.

Overholser Pleased.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth Hospital and bitter foe of the existing lunacy commitment laws here, yesterday expressed admiration of the forthright recommendations in the lengthy mental hygiene section of the Public Health Service report.

Last December, in his first local public address as head of the Federal Government's largest institution for mental diseases, Dr. Overholser called the District lunacy law "barbarous" because it takes a patient into open court—the criminal branch of the District Court—and parades the private lives of him and his relatives in public.

Reforms recommended by Dr. Grover A. Kempf, who conducted the mental hygiene survey, and seconded by Surgeon General Parran go far beyond those sought in the King bill.

Law Called "Inhumane."

If changes urged by the Public Health Service are enacted, not only will the lunacy jury be abolished but persons may be admitted to St. Elizabeth upon direct application there. Admittance also would be possible by certification of the District health officer or by two qualified private physicians. A jury would be impaneled only for rehearings, and then at the court's discretion.

Pointing out that five of every ten persons who reported at public clinics have mental problems associated with their physical conditions, the report says:

"The commitment laws of the District of Columbia are inhumane and based only on the view that mental illness is a legal problem and not a medical one. The law concludes that the person must wait until he is dangerous to himself or others before he is committed to treatment."

Bar Disapproves.

It was emphasized that only Mississippi and the District retain the obligatory jury trial.

"The laws, policies and procedures concerning admission to a mental hospital in the District are complicated and seemingly devised to make it as difficult as possible for a mentally ill person to obtain treatment," the report continued.

"There are two reasons for this. One is the parsimonious attitude to insure payment of costs of treatment before admission to a public hospital and the other is the intolerance of the legal profession to any interference with its prerogatives. The law still regards mental illness entirely as a legal problem and not a medical one."

The King bill, indorsed by the District Medical Society and the Federation of Citizens Associations, first was approved by the District bar association, then disapproved.

Oddly enough, practically all of the suggestions received by Senator Copeland and Corporation Counsel Seal have been from doctors. It is believed the bar association will not fight enactment of the measure.

Misses Colt Lose Fight to Save Ancestral Home From HOLC

Foreclosure Upheld Despite Claim That U. S. Agency Backed Down on Loan Pomise; Sisters Face Eviction.

Judge Charles W. Woodward at Rockville, yesterday, upheld validity of a foreclosure sale on October 5, 1936, of the 15-room house of the Misses Katherine Gideon and Alice Ely Colt, 7 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md. In the seventeen months since the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bid in the property for $9,000, the two—both nearly 70—have hoped that they would be able to keep their home.

When the decree was revealed last night to Miss Katherine, elder of the two, she maintained the calm with which she has met other crises. Standing amidst antique furniture that has been in her family for generations, she received the news in silence, except to motion the reporter to a far end of the living room. "Come over here," she said. "My sister is ill, and I don't want her to hear you."

S. Jay McCathran, jr., who, with two associates, Charles M. Irelan, jr., and S. Albert Mickler, has contributed his services in the long legal battle with the Government, exclaimed last night, "God only knows what will become of them."

Except for two distant cousins, the Misses Colt are the last survivors of an old Washington family.

In 1933, pressing financial conditions forced the two sisters to seek assistance from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. They were without resources and without employment, for they had been brought up in an era when vocational training was unheard of for young ladies.

They received a $9,500 loan from from HOLC, but almost immediately it was realized that they had no income from which to repay the debt. Their attorneys maintained that HOLC thereupon suggested a second loan to pay for reconditioning the house for roomers.

Charging that HOLC had actually promised to make the reconditioning loan, McCathran last night attacked the corporation's "delinquency" as "immoral."

The foreclosure sale was held in October, 1936.

"It was only after a thorough and most sympathetic investigation had established beyond any doubt in the minds of the officials who reviewed this case the utter hopelessness of the problems facing the Misses Colt that foreclosure was authorized," an HOLC statement said.

Howard Acton, of HOLC, declared last night when he heard of Judge Woodward's decision that, "We have no hard-boiled attitude in these matters. The human element certainly enters into consideration. We must recognize, on the other hand, our responsibility for the property and the taxpayers' money. If the persons evicted have no resources or relatives, HOLC then gets in touch with local relief authorities."

Attorneys for the sisters were undecided whether they would carry the case to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Liquor Credit Rules Issued By D. C. Heads

Regulations Govern Sales by Big Firms to Retailers.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a set of regulations designed to facilitate and permit better control of the extension of credit between manufacturers or wholesalers of liquor and retailers.

The new regulations, four in number, will forbid the sale of alcoholic beverages to any retailer who is delinquent in his accounts. Members of the board have previously stated that this single factor has caused much trouble between wholesalers and retailers.

The regulation states, "no alcoholic beverage shall be sold by any manufacturer or wholesaler to any retailer, nor shall any retailer purchase any alcoholic beverage, except for cash or on terms requiring payment by the purchaser on or before the fifteenth of the month following the month of purchase or delivery, which is hereby determined and declared to constitute a reasonable extension of credit, as provided by sections 18 and 19 of the alcoholic beverage control act."

Manufacturers and wholesalers are specially warned not to sell, except for cash, any alcoholic beverages to delinquent dealers. Futhermore, dealers are forbidden from purchase of alcoholic beverages when delinquent in their accounts.

Each delivery of any alcoholic beverage to a licensee must be accompanied by an invoice of sale or delivery slip which shall bear its date of delivery of the beverages, the regulations state.

The ABC board further requested all manufacturers and wholesalers to supply them with a list of all delinquent accounts before the twentieth of the month.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal had previously approved the regulations.

Press Supplies U.S. Opposition, Morley Avers

Post Editor Says Papers Assume Burden of Party Government.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Haven, Conn., March 4.—The American press since 1933 has assumed a large share of the responsibility for maintaining in this country the parliamentary opposition "so necessary in a system of party government," Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, declared today in a lecture at Yale University.

Morley spoke on the foundation established by Paul Block, the publisher, to promote a better understanding of the press as a political force.

Propaganda Avoided.

Asserting that all intellectual development, as well as the existence of democracy, depends on "an informed and definitely critical public opinion," he advised newspaper readers not to resent criticism "when it happens to be turned against their particular sacred cow" but "only when it is unfair, malicious or purely captious."

Responsible journals will avoid propaganda, Morley said, but should not take refuge in editorial neutrality on the great issues of the day.

"Between propaganda and zeal for what is held to be a righteous cause there is a vast difference, although the differentiation is not always apparent to the reader who is himself an unwitting propagandist."

Urges Independence.

The country needs fewer newspapers which label themselves Republican, Democratic, Socialist or Communist and more which justifiably call themselves Independent, Morley remarked.

The number of completely uninfluential American newspapers was described by the editor as "a thought-provoking hint that the profession as a whole is failing in its task of widening the field of public opinion. To the extent that this is true the press also fails in its duty to the democratic system and is perhaps actually militating against the success of that system."

Pointing out that the press is "both a reflection and a determinant of its place and period," Morley said that "any alert and aggressive community can, by clearly indicating the sort of paper it wants, do much to obtain exactly that sort of a paper."

Detective Holds Man Found Cutting Rail Signal Cable

Avoiding death from a high tension cable only to fall into the hands of the law, Buster Hodo, 28, colored, was held for investigation last night at Fourth Precinct Station after Detective C. C. Carver reported he found the man cutting a copper signal acble atop the R. F. & P. Railway bridge.

Carver said he had been watching the bridge after the cable had been cut seven times since February 15.

It was reported 800 pounds of copper, valued at 30 cents a pound, was stolen in that period. The cable, which carries a low voltage for operating signals on the bridge, is near a high-tension line, which would have electrocuted anyone coming in contact.

Knight Identifies Woman Dead on Ship as His Wife

Norfolk, Va., March 4. (AP).—Drexel Knight of Washington, a Government employe, today identified the body of the woman found dead yesterday morning on the Norfolk-Washington steamer Northland, as that of his wife, Mrs. Viola Nolan Knight, 36.

Knight's opinion as to the cause of his wife's sudden death coincided with that of City Coroner C. D. J. MacDonald,—that Mrs. Knight died of a heart attack.

Dr. MacDonald said he had listed the death as due to "causes unknown to the coroner at this time" pending the result of an analysis of the contents of the woman's stomach.

The body was sent tonight to Old Greenwich, Conn., for funeral services and burial.

Growth of Skiing Described Before Geographic Society

The rapid development of skiing in the United States in the last decade was described last night to members of the National Geographic Society by Sidney N. Shurcliff with the aid of natural color motion pictures.

Breath-taking scenes were shown of the trials at Tuckerman Ravine, on the slopes of Mount Washington in New Hampshire; at Berthoud Pass, Colorado; Aspen, Colo.; Sun Valley, Idaho; Mount Rainier, Wash., and in Yosemite National Park in California.

Snow accumulates to a depth of 120 feet in Tuckerman Ravine during the winter, and Shurcliff said that skiing in this area is good until May and June. The headwall of Tuckerman, rising about 300 feet, slopes at an angle of 45 degrees and skiers often negotiate it at from 50 to 60 miles an hour.

At Berthoud Pass, Shurcliff's camera caught skiers sliding down the slopes of the Rockies with peaks rising more than 13,000 feet as a background. The trails themselves are more than 11,000 feet above sea level.

Sun Valley is not only a skiing area, but palatial hotels and lodges there have midwinter swimming in pools of heated water for guests.

Danger Lies In War Talk, Beard Warns

Historian Says Roosevelt Diverts Notice With Foreign Rows.

After five years of bold experimentation in legislation and action, the Roosevelt Administration finds itself face to face with "inexorable facts" which bode no good for democracy and—to divert the attention of the country—is engaging in the dangerous practice of talking about wars, war-scares and quarrels abroad, Dr. Charles A. Beard charged last night at the Conference for the Conservation of Human Resources.

Talk about war and the request for "executive powers useful for action in Europe or Asia," the eminent historian warned, may readily lead into a definite war plan for "presentation to a bewildered Congress and a helpless Nation."

Debt Increase Cited.

This idea was one of 15 "theses" which Beard presented to the conference for the stated purpose of invoking consideration and debate. All 15 he declared to be of vital concern to persons interested in preservation of democracy—and especially to women.

"Man is a kind of predatory animal that can live in caves, barracks and trenches, but women as agents and bearers of civil culture will be utterly crushed and subdued if the democratic way of life is destroyed," he declared.

Depletion of natural resources, growth of tenancy, increase in the proportion of debts to the total volume of wealth, and "no evidence that American economy as historically practiced" can absorb the unemployed were other points touched upon by the historian.

Modification Needed.

"With millions of unemployed voters on Government doles, with millions of officeholders under Government patronage, with the upper third of the farmers receiving Government subventions, with railways, banks and other private institutions leaning on Government credit and loans, with the bureaucracy of the Army and Navy in absolute control, the probabilities are that any strong political protests of the disinherited will be stifled at the polls and if necessary elsewhere," Beard declared.

He further maintained that the increased production of goods and wealth needed in America cannot be attained without substantial modifications in the practices of historical capitalism and that such modifications "would so materially affect the vested rights, customary practices, and expectant interests of the great body of property owners, large and small, that it is practically out of the question."

"Hence," he said, "the historic methods that have resulted in the growth of farm tenancy, in unemployment, and in the waste of natural resources are likely to continue until the physical basis of the system has been exhausted."

Situation Like Rome's.

With one notable exception, America is in a situation "externally analogous in many respects to that of the Roman empire at the end of the fourth century," Beard declared. The exception is that American leaders have available "enormous, exact, and realistic bodies of knowledge useful in checking the destructive tendencies and in directing American energies, skills, and resources into productive channels."

"The problem of the hour," he concluded, "is whether intelligence and managerial capacity can employ this knowledge, overtake and overcome catastrophe and can effect that wide and general equality of property, income, employment, and cultural interest upon which democracy must depend for its existence."

Other speakers at yesterday's sessions of the conference included Dr. Samuel J. Holmes, professor of zoology at the University of California; John Ihlder, director of the Alley Dwelling Authority of the District of Columbia; Dr. Hazel Stiebeling, of the national Bureau of Home Economics.

War Study Urged.

Dr. H. C. Ingelbrecht, author of "Revolt Against War;" Dr. Louis N. Robinson, member of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration; William A. Cameron, managing director of the National Safety Council, and Prof. Halford E. Luccock, professor of homiletics at the Yale Divinity School.

Dr. Ingelbrecht advocated the introduction of a course on war and its harmful effects on the human race into the school curriculum. He scoffed at the "old idea" that wars cleared out the unfit and saved the fit, declaring that present-day wars are "roads which lead to race deterioration." Not only the best physical material but the best intelligence of nations is destroyed in wars, he declared. Wars increase crime, leave their effects on the health of the generations too young to fight, increase immorality, and result in many suicides and mental derangements, Ingelbrecht asserted.

Charges Denied By Recreation Board Official

Met 'Many Times,' Barrett Informs Playground Council Session.

Denying recent charges that the District Recreation Committee had held only one meeting in the past two years, Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator and executive secretary, flatly told the Citywide Playground Council last night that his committee has met "many times."

Barrett, who spoke at the March session of the council, in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, approved Senator King's bill, sponsored by the Recreation Committee, for consolidating District playgrounds under a recreation board.

Establishment of a "Citizens' Joint Committee on Recreation" was advocated in a resolution adopted by the council. The committee, consisting of two delegates from each of various civic groups, would engage in "close study of the recreational system of the District of Columbia" and of the King bill, "so that a comprehensive and helpful report and recommendations can be made available to the organizations represented upon such committee" and to any other interested groups in the District.

Following Barrett's address, expressions from the floor indicated some dissatisfaction with the King bill's provision for only one District resident on the proposed recreation board. Barrett agreed that fuller District representation might be advisable. One suggestion was that five District residents be appointed to the board, including two women and two colored members.

Miss Sibyl Baker, District superintendent of playgrounds, was among those who agreed that criticisms of Barrett had been unfair.

Julian C. Hammack, president of the council, was in the chair.

Guides at Capitol To Slough Civilian Garb for Uniforms

After many years of going about their work in ordinary garb, Capitol guides soon will step into neat blue uniforms patterned after those worn by National Park Service guides. The 14 men and 10 women on guide duty at the Capitol voted for the change themselves.

However, the idea is understood to have come originally from members of Congress who contended that guides should be distinguished by more than badges and should appear more nattily clad than in civilian coats and trousers that sometimes do not match. New badges will be furnished to set off the uniforms.

Brother of Man Shot in District Holdups Seized

Arrest in Philadelphia Follows 4 Months of Searching.

Arrest on a Philadelphia street of Ulysses Robinson, 18, colored, sought four months for questioning in connection with 20 holdups here, was announced yesterday by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives. He said the arrest was made by Detective Sergts. Harry Briton and Joseph Shimon.

Robinson's brother, George, 30, is in Gallinger Hospital in undetermined condition from four gunshot wounds received in a gun battle with Detective Robert V. Murray, in an attempted holdup at a liquor store at 2001 Sherman avenue northwest, December 17. Police say Ulysses Robinson was his brother's partner, but escaped in a waiting car.

Two days ago, police say, Bernard Butler, 18, colored was arrested on an open charge. He is believed to have worked with the Robinson brothers, and to have driven the car used in escape from the Sherman avenue holdup.

Opera Discussed By Miss Schelling

Miss Julia A. Schelling, noted opera critic and commentator, last night addressed the Opera Appreciation Forum at the Rialto Theater on the "History and Background of Opera."

In the round table discussion following the lecture, Dr. Will Hutchins, dean of arts at American University who presided at the meeting, stressed the fact that English opera has never been successful, because the translation of the libretto from the original language lacked inspiration.

He explained that opera would never be successful in English until translators "learn to write poetically and have some of the finesse of the original composers.

Contracts Are Let For Bolling Field

The War Department yesterday awarded contracts totaling more than $500,000 for improvements to Bolling Field.

One contract for construction and completion of a heating plant at a cost of $108,089 went to the 1114 Eighteenth street northwest. Norair Engineering Corporation.

Another for $477,750 was awarded to the Virginia Engineering Co., Newport News, Va., for hangars.

Soviet Trials Are Ridiculed By Dr. Walsh

Charges Compared to Calling Farley Plotter for Landon.

Charges now being brought forward in the Soviet treason trials of Old Guard Bolsheviks are as fantastic as an assertion that James A. Farley is "the head and front of a conspiracy to seize the White House for Gov. Landon and confront Mrs. Roosevelt with a fait accompli some morning at breakfast," the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh said last night.

Speaking in Memorial Continental Hall, the vice president of Georgetown University declared that under Russian procedure President Roosevelt could suddenly order any of his previous advisers or present officials to immediate execution on evidence of his own making.

Ickes Speech Cited.

"Thus, he would drown Mr. Tugwell in a hogshead of molasses because he trafficked with Russia some years ago and wrote a report on conditions in that country. Gen. Hugh Johnson would be asphyxiated in lethal gas for having agreed in several minor details with Jouett Shouse. And Mr. Ickes would be hanged for gratuitous advice to the British."

Soviet "confessions" are meaningless, Dr. Walsh stated, because "Bolshevik law permits pressure, persuasion and torture as instruments of proletarian justice."

Stalin Fears Revolt.

The reported plane flight from Russia to Finland of several Bolshevik officials and refusal of certain Russian diplomats to return to Moscow are evidence of the "extent and ferocity of the terror" within the Soviet state.

"The whole melancholy performance," he concluded, "demonstrates how deply Mr. Stalin fears revolt among the peasants and in the army, and how ruthlessly he produces scapegoats to divert and assauge their resentment."

A summons to Moscow for Marshal Bluecher, commander of Soviet troops in Eastern Siberia, would be the signal for the "final explosion," Dr. Walsh predicted.

Georgia 'Fugitive' Loses Foot Race In District Court

An impromptu foot race was developed in the District Court yesterday when John R. Beach, 24 years old, who, according to the Department of Justice, is a "fugitive from a chain gang" of Georgia, slipped from his wrists a pair of handcuffs and sought to outfoot a group of deputy marshals.

Stanley B. Rider, president of the Greenbelt Citizens' Association, and an unidentified cab driver brought an end to Beach's freedom. One of them tripped him and the other grabbed him. Meanwhile someone had fired four shots in the air as a warning to halt.

Beach had pleaded guilty to a charge involving interstate transportation of a stolen automobile, and was awaiting arraignment on two charges, when he saw his chance to escape.

25-Game Winner Gets Lots of Respect.

By Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla.

On the theory that a chap who could win 25 games in any league must have more than a spark of pitching talent, the Washington baseball bosses are slightly deferential to young Joe Kohlman. In fact, no Class D rookie ever received quite the respect that young Mr. Kohlman is commanding in the Nats' camp.

POVICH.

He's a fellow apart from the common herd of tank-league rookies. He towered above his colleagues in the Eastern Shore League so strikingly that even the clubhouse boys are treating this bush leaguer with respect and attention, which is the final test. They've given him a choice locker in the dressing room, his uniforms are always neatly arrayed and he has been accepted by the clubhouse lackeys as something of a big shot. Other rookies from higher-class leagues must shift for themselves in the locker room, but not young Mr. Kohlman.

And the Messrs. Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith, who happen to manage and own, respectively, the Washington club, are acting very solicitous, too, about the young fellow's welfare. They think that, in young Kohlman, they have something.

It all dates back to last season in the Eastern Shore League at Salisbury, Md., where Pitcher Kohlman was a five-ply sensation with his pitching. The Salisbury team happens to be one of the clubs in the Nats' farm system, but it was in a round-about way that Clark Griffith became acutely interested in Pitcher Kohlman.

The Nats' owner was discussing the Salisbury Club with Joe Cambria, who runs the team, and heard Cambria relate that one of his pitchers had won 19 straight games. "Nineteen straight!" ejaculated Griffith, "I'd better take a look at him. What's his name?"

Griffith Goes Scouting

"He's George Comellas, a little Cuban," said Cambria, "but he isn't our best pitcher."

"Nineteen straight and not your best pitcher, what do you mean?" asked Griffith incredulously. "You have got a better pitcher than a fellow who wins 19 straight?"

"Yep," said Cambria. "We've got a fellow named Joe Kohlman, who has won 20 straight. He's our best pitcher."

Intrigued by the presence of such a performer on one of his farm teams, the Washington club owner demanded to know when Kohlman was next scheduled to pitch. He must see with his own eyes a pitcher who could win 20 straight. Cambria agreed to pitch Kohlman two days later. It was to be "Boosters Day" at the Salisbury Park. Griffith would attend.

That day, with the Nats' owner sitting in the stands, Kohlman took the mound against the Centreville Club. Knowing he was being scouted, Kohlman apparently was unconcerned. He proceeded to pitch a no-hit game.

If you want the full truth about Kohlman, he lost only one game during the regular season while winning 25. And he won those 25 consecutively after losing, 5 to 4, in the opening game of the season when three errors behind him cost him the victory. He gained revenge on that Centerville club before the season ended, shutting 'em out six times.

Hurls No-Hitter

He met up with Centreville again in the play-off for the league pennant and beat 'em in the first game, 6 to 0. It was a no-hit performance until the ninth inning, when a bunt caught the Salisbury infield flat-footed. He dropped his second start in the play-off to Centreville by a 3-2 score, despite the fact that he didn't allow an earned run, and the series stood at 2-2 when the teams moved into Centreville for the final game for the title.

That night, Kohlman was pretty good. He pitched a no-hit game to win the championship. One Alec Pitko, big outfielder now in the camp of the Phillies, was the chief batting threat of Centreville in that final game. Kohlman struck him out four times, to be exact.

Griffith brought Kohlman up to Washington two weeks before the season ended and let him pitch against the Athletics. He had 'em beat, 7-4, when Wesley Ferrell relieved him in the eighth inning. The A's scored three runs off Ferrell to tie the score at 7-7 before darkness ended the game. Kohlman made one other start for the Nats in 1937. He beat the Athletics, 4-2, in Shibe Park.

He's no giant as pitchers go, this 23-year-old black-haired youth from Pleasantville, N. J. At this writing he weighs only 170 pounds, 10 more than his 1937 weight, but 10 pounds that he hopes to keep on his frame in an effort to develop his fast ball. If he can come up with a good fast one, Bucky Harris believes he'll be a winner in the big leagues.

Not Among Giants

In 13 innings he pitched for the Nats last season, he walked only one hitter, which was about his average in the Eastern Shore League. Control, the bane of most rookie pitchers, doesn't plague Kohlman. He walked only 54 men for Salisbury in 45 games last year. He's got a cute curve and a deceptive motion and Salisbury folks vow he's the gamest athlete who ever pulled on a uniform.

He's not new to the big league training camps. When fresh out of high school, as a lad of 18, he had a fling with the Athletics at Fort Myers, Fla., but was dismissed without being given a contract. The Athletics called him back in 1935 and signed him for the Williamsport club of the Penn League. It was while with the

Bout Halted By Referee In 7th Round

Californian Admits He 'Has Enough;' 8,565 Watch Upset.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Gunnar Barlund, ring-scarred Finnish heavyweight, sprang a fistic upset tonight by stopping Jacob Henry (Buddy) Baer, jr., giant younger brother of Max, in the seventh round of a ten-round match, the main bout at Madison Square Garden. Referee Billy Cavanagh halted the bout in 1:36 of the seventh as Baer hung on the ropes in his own corner, and awarded a technical knockout victory to Barlund.

The outcome not only surprised a gathering of 8,565 cash customers, who paid $23,102.34, but shocked the betting fraternity which had made Baer a 5 to 12 choice to win and 5 to 6 favorite to win by a knockout.

Took Terrific Beating.

Baer called it quits after taking a pasting for five of the six rounds. He was not once knocked off his feet, though he slipped and went to his knees once, in the sixth round, but Buddy turned appealingly to his corner and then to the referee just before the bout came to a sudden ending.

"I've had enough," Baer mumbled to Cavanagh as the referee started to pry the pair apart.

Baer, in his own corner, was on the receiving end of a two-handed shellacking, and was bleeding freely from the nose and mouth. His arms dangled at his side. His huge shoulders slumped.

Barlund, notwithstanding he was himself cut badly about the nose, chin and eyes, weathered Baer's heaviest guns in the opening round and then proceeded to give Max Baer's younger brother an artistic shellacking. The sturdy Finn spotted his rival 42 pounds, scaling only 200¼ to Buddy's 242½, but his effective lefthand punching and superior generalship more than offset Baer's physical advantages.

Bellus Beats Vaughn.

Johnny Bellus, New Haven lightweight, 135¼, won decisively from Jimmy Vaughn, Cleveland, 136¾, in a six-rounder fought after the main event.

Other results:

Nick Camarata, New Orleans, 132¼, won from Pete Lello, Chicago, 134¼, six rounds; Pete Scalzo, New York, 126, won from Christobal Jaramillo, Puerto Rico, 122, six rounds; Johnny Morro, New York, 135, won from Joe Ghouly, St. Louis, 134, six rounds; Harley O'Dell, Des Moines, 190¾, won from Al Ryll, Springfield, Mass., 181, four rounds.

Four-Minute Mile Is Now Predicted By Cunningham

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Glenn Cunningham believes the mile record eventually will be cut to an even 4 minutes.

"Some day, somewhere, somebody will run a 4-minute mile," the powerful Kansan said today in a radio interview on his return from his record-smashing 4:04.4 performance at Hanover, N. H., last night.

"I would like to get the mile record down where it belongs," he added.

He declared the hardest part of running a mile race was the "few hours before it starts and the day afterward talking about it." Cheering helps a runner, he said, but smoking by spectators in a closed arena definitely is a hindrance and should be banned.

Maryland's Five Drops From Event

Clemson Victorious Over Washington and Lee by 38 to 33.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Raleigh, N. C., March 4.—Maryland University bowed to Duke's Blue Devils, 35—32, tonight in a whirlwind finish which had the 5,000 spectators witnessing the semi-final rounds of the Southern Conference basketball tourney in Raleigh Memorial Gym constantly on their feet.

Maryland, a berth in the conference finals tomorrow in its grasp by virtue of an early lead, faded out in the second half to lose in the final moments of the game.

Dutch Knepley, Terp forward started the action by looping in a long one from the mid-court, but a free one by Duke's Hoffman a few seconds later followed by one potted by Edwards put Duke in the lead, 3-2. Another free throw and baskets by Bill Rea, Terp guard, and Eddie Johnson, center, put Maryland out in front, 7-3.

The Devils then penetrated deep into the Terrapins' defense. Fred Edwards swished one, followed by a free throw, and his teammate Ed Swindell found the hoop for another, before Fred scored again to put the score at 10-8. The Old Line quint had been unable to score throughout the Duke drive and Dutch Knepley's free throw gave them the only point.

Free throws were the order of the day for both teams for several minutes as Mickey Mulitz, Wave Wheeler and Knepley tossed one apiece for Maryland, and Ed Swindell one for Duke.

Then Wheeler found the Devils basket vulnerable for two more to give the Terps 15. The period ended a few seconds later as Duke's Russ Bergman tossed in another. Half time saw the teams idling with the score 15-14 in favor of Maryland.

Maryland pushed forward at the opening of the second session and baskets by Wheeler, Headley and Bengoachea gave the Terps a 23-17 edge over the Dukes who had rated but three points.

Scoring got hot as the two teams threw time after time in an effort to prove supremacy. Dutch Knepley basketed one, only to have it equaled by a toss by Bergman, of the opposition.

Duke gained steadily as the Terps faded back. Baskets by Swindell, O'Mara and Hoffman gave the Devils a 31-30 lead over Maryland, another by Bergman made it 33.

In a desperate attempt to recoup Maryland's lost lead, Coleman Headley threw a highly-arced ball at the basket. Spectators rose to their feet en masse as it plopped through without touching the rim, putting the score at 33-32. But the Devils now had the bit between their teeth and Edwards swished once more before the end to make the final score 35-32.

Wave Wheeler scored 13 points to lead in points. He was trailed by Duke's Edwards with 10.

Indiana Ace Scores 30 Points As Hoosiers Beat Illini, 45-35

New Big Ten Scoring Record Set by Andres; Plays Last Part With Injured Leg.

By the Associated Press.

Champaign, Ill., March 4.—Ernie Andres, of Indiana, established a new big ten individual scoring record tonight of 30 points in leading the Hoosiers to a 45-35 victory over Illinois.

Andres, playing the last part of the game with an injured leg after racking up 28 points, scored his last basket on a follow-up shot with one minute of the game remaining and then was immediately replaced.

He bettered by one point the former individual record established by Joe Rieff, of Northwestern, in 1933 and tied by Jewell Young, of Purdue, twice and Pick Dehner, of Illinois, once.

Indiana went into the lead during the last two minutes of the first half and was never headed from there on in. A midway last-half rally by the Illini brought the score up from 34 to 19, to 34 to 31, but Andres and teammates settled down at this juncture and salted the game away.

A crowd of 6,219 watched both schools wind up their big ten schedules.

Columbus U. Boxers Win

Defeat King College by 4½ to 3½ at Arena.

By Bob Garrison.

The looping left hand of heavyweight Jim Brown successfully closed Columbus University's 1938 boxing season with a 4½ to 3½ triumph over King College, at Turner's Arena last night.

In plain view of 1,000 persons, who watched him battle against a 13½ pound weight advantage, the local boy won a unanimous decision over 193½-pound Dale Gay to break an existing 3½ to 3½ tie in the Exviously defeated the University of Tennessee sking team in its only other match this season.

It was the first defeat of the season for the visitors, who had previously defeated four teams, including the University of Tennessee swing team.

Forfeits in the 145 and 165 pound weight divisions sent the teams into action tied at 1-all.

King forfeited in the 145-pound bout because of injury and the local school retaliated in the 165 class when it could not offer a man weighing within the 3-pound limit.

Lefty Lou Hayman, Columbus 175 pounder, got up off the canvas twice to earn a draw with Emil Gavlak.

Hayman took nine counts in the third round after a no-count trip in the second. But he landed often with his left and finished strong to even things.

Bill Crum, of Columbus, and Clyde Price King 165-pounder, fought an exhibition. Crum was outweighed 13½ pounds, therefore no decision was rendered.

George Marker, 115-pounder, gave the local club its first legitimate score by pounding out an easy decision over Jimmy Sawyer. Sawyer, apparently inexperienced, set some sort of a record by going the distance without landing a blow.

Lewis Summers took a majority decision from Columbus' Ray Morse, in the 125-pound bout to even the score. Both tired in the second but several looping rights to the head won the nod for the visitor.

Jim Willis, of Columbus, slugged with an undefeated slugger and lasted to win a decision over Warren Wilkinson, King's 135-pound entry. It was the best fight of the program and saw two game boys slug throughout.

Dave Schlaifer, the Explorer's 155-pounder, found his opponent, Ed Sweet, anything but that and dropped a decision. Sweet was the aggressor and bested the local boy with a heavy right.

Chandler Harper Shoots 282, Ties Revolta in St. Pete Open

Richmond Pro Fires Sub-Par 69-68 to Overhaul Leader; Playoff Is Set for Today at 18 Holes.

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4.—Chandler Harper, Richmond professional, came from behind with two sub par rounds today to tie Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., for honors in the finals of the $3,000 St. Petersburg Open golf tournament.

Shooting for the $700 first prize, Revolta and Harper were deadlocked at 282. They will meet tomorrow in an 18-hole playoff. The loser will get $450 in second place money.

Harper toured the final 36 holes over the Lakewood course in 69-68, five under par, to improve his card of 145. Revolta, former P. G. A. champion who led the tournament two days with rounds of 69, fired a par 71 this morning; dropped to a 73 this afternoon.

One stoke back of the leaders was Bryon Nelson, of Reading, Pa., who added a 69 and 71 to his previous 143.

Nelson, who won the Thomasville Open last week, collected $350.

Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, turned in a 67 on his final round to go into a tie with Sammy Byrd, of Philadelphia, for honors in the following bracket, 284. They divided $500.

Grouped at 286 were Ben Hogan, of Fort Worth, Tex.; Harry Cooper,

Natie Brown Loses Battle

Veteran D. C. Boxer Is Beaten by Adamick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, March 4.—Natie Brown, the veteran Washington heavyweight, who has tested the punching power of most of the leading men in his class, took the best blows of young Jimmy Adamick, the newest sensation among the big fellows, here tonight, and barely lost the decision in a grueling ten-round battle.

Dropped for counts of seven in both the first round and again the sixth, Brown made the most of his defensive ability to weather the storm in these sessions, and was still banging away at the finish—much to the surprise of Adamick and his handlers.

The bout was only a minute old when Adamick hit the bullseye for the first time, and it appeared as though Natie had come to the end of the road. He was trying valiantly to get to his feet when the bell rang. That saved him.

When he went down in the sixth round, it was a left hook that started him on his way. He staggered along the ropes and went clear to the other side of the ring before Adamick could deliver a right that dropped him to his knees.

Natie was badly hurt. But he gamely got to his feet and again went into his shell—a crab-like defense from which he lashed out with lefts and rights that occasionally had the young Midland Mauler puzzled.

One of these blows cut Adamick's nose in the fourth round and another series of them staggered the young heavyweight in the ninth. But he came out of them to punch his way to the decision of the judges and the referee.

Sabin Beaten In Net Play

Knee Injury Knocks Ace Out of Finals.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Handicapped by a knee injury suffered in the opening set, Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., top-seeded player, was eliminated by Frank J. Bowden, of New York, 1—6, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3, in the semifinal round of the National Indoor Tennis Championships today.

The Californian, breezing through the first set in fine style, pulled a ligament in his right knee making a quick stop. Leading, 5 to 0, at the time, he took time out while a doctor taped his knee. He won that set, but thereafter couldn't cope with the hard-hitting Bowden at all, and merely played through as a gesture.

Bowden, who took Frankie Parker to five sets in the 1937 title round, tomorrow will meet second-seeded Don McNeill. The Kenyon College student pulled the throttle wide open to rout Gregory S. Mangin, of New York, four-time former champion, 6—0, 7—5, 6—3.

Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, today entered the final round of the Women's National Indoor Singles Tennis Championship by defeated Helen Bernhard, of New Yorkw, 6—3, 6—1.

Miss Winthrop will meet 21-year-old Virginia Hollinger, of Dayton, Ohio. The Midwestern girl, deefated Helen Bernhard, of New York, 6—3,6—1.

Briarley Invited To W.-L. Tourney

Briarley Military Academy's iron-man basketball team has received an invitation to compete in Washington and Lee University's tournament at Lexington, Va., March 10, 11 and 12, it was announced last night. Briarley, despite the handicap of a six-man squad, compiled one of the most impressive records in local school-boy ranks this season.

The squad was presented gold basketballs yesterday by Capt. S. J. Lodge, president of the school and coach, at an assembly of the entire student body. Those honored were Lee Lodge, Bob Chichester, Tom Lodge, Charles Hodgkin, Metcalf Lodge and Paul Wight.

W.-L. Upsets Western Five

Generals Win by 33-24; Eastern on Top.

By Jack Munhall.

A powerful "dark horse" loomed in the Metropolitan Tournament last night as Eastern defeated Georgetown Prep, 40-9, and Washington-Lee upset the defending champion, Western, 33-24, before some 500 spectators at Tech gym.

The Generals flashed a dangerous passing and shooting attack that may cause Eastern unlimited trouble when the two meet in the semi-finals today at Tech. This game, scheduled to start at 2 o'clock will precede the game between Bethesda-Chevy Chase and St. John's.

This latter contest is the deciding game of a series which was deadlocked when the Marylanders beat the Johnnies in the season's most startling scholastic form reversal.

As surprising as was Washington-Lee's great showing was the dismal performance of Georgetown Prep which apparently could do nothing right against the smooth Easterners. One bright spot in the victory was the impressive exhibition given by Mike Kelly's second team which he inserted in the last period.

Western's downfall was a miserable start which seemed to shake the Georgetowners' confidence. Never did the Red Raiders play up to their recognized ability for once the Virginians jumped into the lead, they looked very, very good. Height was the vital factor of their triumph. Eastern Center Seizes Rebounding Ball

Clint Quantrille proved too quick for Capt. Paul Kelly (No. 12) and Earl Nadler (No. 7), of Georgetown Prep. Lee Lusby, Eastern's star of the game, views the play while running under the basket. This bit of action happened at Tech last night as the Lincoln Parkers routed the Little Hoyas, 40-9.

War Admiral Rules Choice for Widener

D. C. Horse Ranks Next to Pompoon; FastTrack Expected for Race.

Odds on the Glen Riddle Entry Down to 2 to 5; Burning Star Backed.

Haight

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hialeah Race Track, Fla., March 4. War Admiral, famous son of a famous sire, will be summoned to the post tomorrow in the Widener Handicap and two minutes later Mr. Samuel Riddle, of Philadelphia, will be enriched by $51,550—or the odds makers know not what they do.

The sprightly little son of Man o' War is one of 17 overnight entries in the farwell stake of Hialeah's 46-day meeting, but on every side it is regarded as a one-horse race. The others will have War Admiral to catch when the herd reaches the turn for home—that's the prerace outlook.

The prospect is that the $2 will get you only $1 if you care to risk a few bob on the Riddle Barn's little red horse who will doubtless be hammered down to a 1-to-2 shot by post time.

War Admiral Unbeaten.

Unbeaten throughout his 3-year-old career when he took down nine purses and winner of his only 4-year-old start, War Admiral dominates the prerace situation. The buzzing is that he's at razor-edge sharpness and that would appear to be true in the light of his latest workouts over the Hialeah course.

He spun around the mile and a quarter distance of the Widener in handy fashion in 2 minutes and 6 seconds yesterday, and he topped off that performance with a half-mile workout in 50 2-5 this morning. Owner Riddle is free with his opinion that War Admiral will take the track at the start and win in a gallop. He'll be answering the urging of Charlie Kurtsinger, who has ridden him in his every start since he was foaled at Lexington, Ky.

If there is an upset, the likeliest equine heroes of that feat are the Shandon Farm's Burning Star and Thomas J. Healey's recent purchase, Tatterdemalion. Burning Star, like War Admiral, has a fondness for the mile and a quarter distance, and with a 13-pound pull in the weights, is conceded to be a mild threat—an 8-to-1 shot. Tatterdemalion, bought by Healey from the Whitney Stable at the Pimlico sales last fall, won a nice tightener here this week, and his workouts have been more phenomenal than ever War Admiral's. But Tatterdemalion's quality is not yet established. He will carry 23 pounds less than the 130 War Admiral will tote.

Four Entries Doubtful.

The prosepect is that War Admiral's presence in the race has scared at least four entries out of the stake. Columbiana, last year's winner; Page Boy; Bourbon King and Maedis are entered in other races on the day's card and doubtless will decline the issue in the Widener.

The ever-present long-shot tips on the Widener are as free here as the sunlight. Out of the side of the mouth, folks are whispering that R. A. Moore's reformed plater, Piccolo, will take it all that Caballero II has better than a fair chance, that the Denemark entry, trained by William Booth, cannot be underrated. But when the stampede to the mutuel windows begins, War Admiral will be the name on the lips of the heavy bettors.

Hialeah, which weaned the Riddle star away from the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, to be run tomorrow in California, is cashing in on the presence of War Admiral in the race here. Grandstand prices have been boosted from $1.50 to $2.50, bleacher seats near the stretch turn which have been selling daily for 60 cents, tomorrow will retail at $1.50, and all badges have been revoked with only the working press crashing the gate.

The gathering, which may reach 32,000, will be a record crowd in Hialeah history.

Perhaps in gratitude for War Admiral's entry in the race, President Joseph D. Widener has permitted Owner Riddle to stable his star in the private Widener barn at Hialeah. The field will be shooting at the Widener Handicap record of 2:01 4-5, set by Mantanga in 1936, and there is a well-defined suspicion that that mark will fall tomorrow—to War Admiral.

ing to isolated San Bernardino Mountain communities we saw relief expeditons bearing food and needed medical supplies to the scores of victims marooned in the highlands.

Los Angeles itself presented a picture of desolation. Streets were piled high with twisted wreckage. Bridges were destroyed, homes ruined.

The beauty of Pasadena was despoiled. The Rose Bowl, the municipal golf course, residential areas famous for their beauty all were flood-scarred and desolate.

But on all sides the work of digging out progressed.

And scattered over the stricken area were hastily set up refugee camps where queues of homeless victims of the rampaging rivers were visible from the air. Red Cross and other relief workers moved among these refugees, comforting the bereaved, feeding the hungry.

The Races Go On.

As we lost altitude for the landing at Burbank Field, the Santa Anita race track appeared below, a clearing in a forest of parked automobiles—evidence that some Californians must have their racing, come what may.

One of the greatest races since Cortez landed the first horse on the Mexican Coast in the sixteenth century is expected to materialize at nearby Santa Anita tomorrow.

Nineteen thoroughbreds, primed with the $100,000 added purse as their objective, were named in the overnight entries for the mile-and-a-quarter classic. This is one more than faced the barrier last year.

Entries Have Few Surprises.

The entries held few, if any surprises. Seabiscuit, the mighty, is in the line-up. So are Aneroid, John A. Manfuso's Washington, D. C. hope; Pompoon, trackshape after a brilliant 3-year-old campaign; Time Supply, veteran of three Santa Anita Handicaps; Indian Broom, third in the last Kentucky Derby; Top Row, winner of the $100,000 prize two years ago; Sceneshifter and Stagehand, Trainer Earl Sande's hopes; Star Shadow, lightly-weighted, whose handlers want a heavy track; Amor Brujo and Ligaroti, a mysterious pair fo South American horses imported for the classic and on down the line to Primulus and Gosum, probably the longest shots if they start.

While the track was as heavy as the mixture for a chocolate cake this afternoon, there is a possibility that it will be fast by post time tomorrow. A heating machine will be run over the track throughout tonight to singe the dampest spots. Among the owners and trainers virtually praying for a fast oval are John Manfuso and Trainer Dion Kerr, America's "board of strategy." Despite in and out form in the mud, both are of the opinion that Aneroid is not an off-track horse.

Only 2 Pick Aneroid.

However, most overnight lines held Aneroid at 6-1. The Washington-owned horse, conqueror of Seabiscuit, last Saturday, is fit and ready but is the "pick" of only 2 of 51 celebrities naming their selections for the big race.

Seabiscuit is the fast-track favorite for the classic. If the oval dries out, he probably will go to the post at 2-to-1. However, a heavy or slow track probably would move Pompoon into favoritism with Star Shadow's odds dropping noticeably.

Archibald's Foe A.W.O.L.

Johnny Mirabelli left a large audience of officials, newspapermen and fans waiting at the Arena door yesterday when he failed to appear for a scheduled public workout.

"He's missed his train arreddy," panted puffy Goldie Ahearn, racing into the Arena at 3 o'clock, a half hour after the workout was supposed to get under way. "Arreddy he's doing this to me. He can't do it—not to me!"

Commissioner Paul Haworth, who was to gaze upon Mirabelli with an official optic to determine whether he appeared to be capable of standing up before Joey Archibald Monday night, weighed the matter solemnly.

"You're sure he's not coming, Mr. Ahearn?" he asked.

"Positivel. He missed th' train."

"Well, this is a serious matter," continued the commissioner in a grave tone, winking at Joe Turner.

"It's da railroad people, that's who," shouted Herr Ahearn. "It's Johnny. He travels on halt care, and they pulled out ahead of time to save themselves from taking a loss on him."

Y.M.C.A. Athletes Face Busy Week

The busiest week-end of the current season looms dead ahead for Central Y. M. C. A., with no less than five of its representative teams slated for action at home and abroad tonight.

The basketball quint left for New York City yesterday to oppose the West Side Y. M. C. A. five tonight. The handball team will journey to Baltimore today for a dual match with the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., with the "Y" Musketeers accompanying them to cross foils with the Y. M. H. A. swordsmen.

The powerful senior Y swimmers will meet the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. tankmen in the Y pool at 8 o'clock, and the wrestling team plays host to the Hagerstown Y graplers at the same hour.

Arlington Hall's Team in College Horse Show Today

Eight Student Teams Compete In Intercollegiate Program

Maryland, Western High School Among Schools to Send Riders to Arlington Hall.

By Jack Paulus,
Sports Editor of The Post.

Riders from five schools will compete this afternoon and tonight in the third annual intercollegiate riding championships in the riding academy at Arlington Hall.

Eight teams, four from Arlington Hall's host equitation school, will vie for the intercollegiate challenge trophy, a cup placed in competition three years ago by the Student Riding Club at the exclusive girls' school.

The University of Maryland, Holton Arms School, Gunston Hall School, Western High School and Arlington Hall will take part in the event, the largest field since the competition began.

The event was begun three years ago by Fritz C. Kleemann, head of Arlington Hall's equitation school and formerly one of the leading riding teachers in his native Germany. The competition, poohpoohed at first by horse people, has grown into its present status in the short space of those three years.

The No. 1 team which will represent Arlington Hall in the classic is the same quartet that has won many honors in the indoor horse shows this winter.

The team includes riders who began equitation courses only 11 months ago. Riding experts at the winter's indoor shows, particularly the President's Paralysis Fund at Fort Myer, were unrestrained in their praise of Herr Kleemann's jumpers. Many expressed the opinion that the Arlington Hall girls have developed unusually fast and that they will become a major force in riding circles in the future.

Herr Kleeman was the usual stern disciplinarian yesterday as he sent his four teams through their paces in the school's almost-rigid riding hall. He shouted harsh directions at riders, yelled at impatient, prancing horses, and dug his riding boots into the cold, damp floor of the riding hall.

"We are not skeptical of the success of the show," said Kleemann "It is only that so many things are to be done yet.

"But for the third show, there is a lot of interest in tomorrow's competition."

Herr Kleemann's No. 1 team is composed of Carol Norton on King Rock; Gwen Rogers on Royal Barton; Ann Hagner on Kismet, and Nancy Rucker on So Long.

Kismet is Kleemann's 31-year-old champion who takes 5-foot jumps with the ease of a horse half his age. Royal Barton is by Sir Barton, the famous sire, out of Getto Girl.

Huge Entry List Is Expected In Post-A.A.U. Court Event

Although entry blanks for the 11th annual Post—A. A. U. basketball championships are available today for the first time, already every advice from various leaders points to a record-breaking field in Washington's big indoor amateur event.

As Winfree Johnson, chairman of the A. A. U. basketball committee, announced registration blanks are ready for disposal, Community Center officials simultaneously assured The Post that their representation will increase at least 50 per cent over last year's.

The blanks, which may be obtained in The Post Sports Department and in the Washington, Merrick and Northeast boys' clubs as well as at Community Center points, must be returned to the Washington Boys Club before midnight, Monday, March 14.

Johnson urges that all teams immediately get in line to avoid a last-minute rush, for no entries will be considered after the deadline.

Yesterday, Harry (Pete) English, director of the Community Center boys' activities, and Ruth Atwell, in charge of girls' activities, were enthusiastic over the interest being displayed by their pupils.

English, who has made remarkable strides with the Community Center athletics, guaranteed that his department would be represented by at least one team in each of the seven weight classes. He estimated that out of the 108 fives, at least 50 would compete.

The same encouraging reports are received from the Community Center girls' department. According to English, who acted as spokesman for Miss Atwell, the past season saw girls' basketball rise to unprecedented heights. Whereas, in 1936-37 there were only six teams in the Community Center League, now there are 12, an increase of 100 per cent.

Team Seeks Games.

The basketball team of Camp 2387, located at Fort Hunt, Alexandria, Va., would like to arrange games with CCC camp basketball teams or local teams from Washington. Write to Theodore Olsen, CCC Camp 2387, Fort Hunt, Alexandria.

A capacity audience packed Friends School gym to see the matches, and saw the host team finish third with 25½ points. Devitt Prep was fourth with 10; St. Anne's fifth with 7, and Calvert sixth with 3. All of the bouts were well contested, although several victors won with surprising ease.

Cunningham Runs Tonight In Baltimore

Kansas Mile Sensation, San Romani, Venzke Feature Meet.

Glenn Cunningham, miracle man of the mile, who came within 4.4 seconds of running the distance in the "impossible" 4 minutes Thursday, will display his talents as the feature of the second annual Terp-Fifth Regiment indoor games in Baltimore tonight.

Headlined by the Governor's Mile, in which the Kansas runner will match strides with his persistent foes, Gene Venzke and Archie San Romani, the meet will bring together the most talented group of trackmen ever assembled under one roof in this vicinity.

Every local college with track squads will be represented in competition that includes the names of Charles Beetham, famed Ohio State middle distance star; Joe McCluskky, New York Athletic Club distance runner; Sam Allen, Oklahoma, and Alan Tolmich, hurdlers; Ed O'Sullivan, sprinter, and Bill Ray, halfmiler.

Besides the Governor's Mile much attention is expected to be attacked to the Oriole "660." Ray, last year's winner is expected to be pushed by Beetham, now running under the colors of the New York Curb Exchange.

Maryland, Catholic University, and Georgetown teams will be well represented, as will other Eastern and Southern schools.

Georgetown and Maryland are grouped with Navy, while Washington and Lee, North Carolina, and Duke are entered in the other heat. The withdrawal of one team would necessitate the running of a five team race.

D. C. High School Athletes Compete

Seeking Eastern recognition against a record-breaking field, 100 local high school athletes are converging on Baltimore for the second annual University of Maryland Regiment Games tonight.

Representing nine schools in the District, Maryland and Virginia, the local thin clads compete in the Fifth Regiment Armory with 103 other formidable schoolboy runners, gathered from points as far North as Canada and as far South as Virginia.

Probably the outstanding event in the scholastic division is the 1,000-yard race which will feature Eddie Morgan, of Overbrook High School, who is considered one of the country's best distance performers.

Washington is well represented in the event, with boys entering from Washington-Lee, Central, Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Tech and Hyattsville High Schols.

Another attractive event will be the 1-mile high school championship relay, in which local athletes seem to have an exceptionally good chance.

One of the most promising individual duels is expected between Jim Milks, crack Washington and Lee distance man, and a previous conqueror, John Stinson, of Newport News High School, Va. In the recent Southern indoor meet at Raleigh, N. C., Milks lost to his fellow Virginian by a stride in the 660.

Eastern gained a 9-0 lead before the bewildered Georgetown Prep could get over a case of jitters. After Earl Nadler, Prep forward, halted the Eastern whitewash, the Lincoln Parkers came right back to run the count to 10-3 at quarter, and 18-4 at half.

The third quarter was Eastern's best. The White Tide rolled 9 points in quick fashion before Coach Kelly began to empty the bench of reserves. The reserves acquitted themselves with honors.

Western was never able to find its stride against the Generals and trailed 10-4, two baskets by Bob Custer being their only points. This same Custer also scored Western's only goals in the second quarter as Washington and Lee grabbed an 18-8 advantage.

Western tried hard in the late going but its every threat was met by a counter attack and the Generals won easily.

Cameramen Boycott Ferrells For Rest of Spring Season

Wes Balks, Rick Joins Hot Word Battle and Lens Boys Decide There'll Be No Photos.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 4.—The Nats took things comparatively easy here when the hottest day of the training season forced Bucky Harris to call a halt to batting practice after 30 minutes of clouting.

The humidity, however, was welcomed by the overweight players who piled on heavy wraps and jogged around the field, melting away the blubber.

Al Simmons, who insisted upon working out long after the rest had gone in, reported that he had shaved off 8 pounds.

The most recent flare-up between the Ferrell freres and newspaper photographers came about today when one of the cameramen asked Wesley, the pitching Ferrell, to strike a pitching pose for him. Wes became ired when the photographer told him how to stand and for a good three minutes there was a word war between ball player and cameraman.

Making sure that the cameraman was not going to outtalk his brother, Rick Ferrell, battery mate of Wes, leaped into the controversy and declared that the Ferrel freres would never again pose for Washington newspaper photographers.

Although hot words flew back and forth, there were no casualties to report save Wes Ferrell's wounded vanity. When Wes finally consented to pose, the cameraman walked away, leaving the Nat pitcher in a ridiculous posture.

This afternoon the cameramen got together and agreed not to photograph the Ferrell brothers again during the remainder of the training season.

Thompson Livingston, the rookie catcher, looked well in batting practice. Bucky Harris has changed the youngster's batting stance and would have him ape Joe Di Maggio's stance at the plate. Livingston is built like the Yankee star, long and lean, and Harris now has him standing at the plate with his feet wide apart.

Nick Altrock, the Nats' clowning coach, was among the most active men at Tinker Field today. Before batting practice he swatted fungoes to the youngsters and then proceeded to play first base during the batting practice. This afternoon he played 18 holes of golf.

There will be no workout here Sunday, for Bucky Harris declared today that he will give his men their last day of rest before Monday, when the two-a-day session starts.

Gainesville Purse Won By Dnieper

Scores 2 Lengths Over Gyral to Reward Backers $8.70.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 4.—About the most important occurence here today came with the running of the featured Gainesville Purse, but it was not the race itself that caused some slight commotion. It was the fact that, when the field went to the post, a light drizzling rain began falling and spectators immediately thought of possible effect on tomorrow's closing day classic, the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup.

The weather man today forecast clear skies and mild winds for this afternoon and tomorrow, but cloudiness replaced the sunshine shortly before the sixth race and the drizzle began soon afterward. While it was hoped that the rain would not become heavy or last long, the owners of Maedic and Mucho Gusto, mudders named for the Widener Cup, were rooting for plenty of downfall.

The Gainesville, which included several withdrawals from the Widener, saw Mose Goldblatt's Dnieper scoring by three lengths over T. D. Buhl's Gyral. Dattner Stable's Chalphone was third, a half length behind. The winner raced the mile and a furlong in 1:52 and paid $8.70.

Early Settler, away slowly, never was a factor in the running, finishing fifth for players of choices.

Rushaway, after delaying the start, was placed outside the stalls. He got away fairly well and was rushed after the fast starting Chalphone. The two waged a nip and tuck duel into the stretch, where both wilted from their early efforts as Jockey Eddie Arcaro moved up with Dnieper, which had been nicely rated behind the leaders. Arcaro rode off his mount and the combination drew out in the last 70 yards.

The light shower continued after this contest.

Spandau Wins.

The next to closing day of the Miami Jockey Club's meeting began with the skies clear after earlier cloudiness. The racing strip was in fine condition.

The usual 3-furlong dash for juveniles opened the program. To Town, $5 for $2 favorite in the field of a dozen maidens, ran back to her splendid recent effort and easily took the purse by two lengths. Breaking rapidly, the Jamestown filly quickly opened up a long lead over Romaunt. The latter held the place safe, beating Welsh Star by a length for that position. The time was :0:34 3-5.

The veteran Tommy Malley, who doesn't see much action these days, broke into the winning column in the 6-furlong second contest, for 3-year-old maidens. He had an easy time guiding G. P. Odom's well played Spandau to a two lengths' success at odds of $7.80 for $2. The colt dashed into a lead of five lengths and never was in danger. Suburbanite, always well up, easily led Paul Scarlet past the wire for the runner-up award, while Grand Token, the choice, tired chasing the winner, and was fourth.

Legenda Breezes Home.

The 8-year-old plater, Crowning Glory, rewarded his many backers in the third event of 7 furlongs. Freddy Scheib, who holds an unbeatable lead for the gold watch awaiting the leading apprentice at the close of the meeting, got his mount away well in a straggling start. Crowning Glory assumed the lead after a quarter-mile and held on to beat Say When by two lengths. Back Fence was a half-length farther behind. The victor returned $5.40.

Legenda, from the successful Woolford Farm outfit, made a show of six other shifty platers in the fourth dash. Closing at 8 to 1, the Insco filly took the lead early and drew out with every stride, winning by a half-dozen lengths under Harvey Keppler. Sachem got up in the last few strides to head the heavy favorite, Gold Buckle, for second money. The latter was a bit slow to get into stride, was sent up to second position, then weakened at the end.

Now Then rang up his first winter victory at the expense of the seven 3-year-olds opposed to him in the fifth race, at 7 furlongs. The Dis Donc colt, an $18.90 for $2 shot, made all the running under Charlie Kurtsinger, War Admiral's rider, and took the purse by a length in handy fashion. Feng disappointed the talent by running second, two lengths clear of Becky Bates.

Sadie F. Wins.

New Orleans, March 4 (AP).—Maintaining her consistent money record, A. N. Goldberg's Sadie F., easily won the six-furlong feature for platers at the Fairgrounds today.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DNIEPER, $8.70, $4.30, $3.80; GYRAL, $20.60, $8.30; CHALPHONE, $6.20.

DNIEPER, well placed in the early running, came around the leaders when straightened into the stretch, wore the leaders down when called upon and won going away. GYRAL, rated off the early pace while racing on the outside all the way, responded gamely when placed to punishment, and shook off CHALPHONE in the last sixteenth mile. CHALPHONE broke alertly, saved ground rounding the first turn, set a steady pace and outlasted RUSHAWAY in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:18. Off 5:20½. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Bonsal's br. f. (3), by Chilhowee—Linrock. Trained by J. M. Black. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL ERROR, $23.40, $10.80, $7.70; TOWN CAR, $6.90, $5.60; WEARY FLOWER, $6.00.

ROYAL ERROR, under slight restraint in the early stages, improved his position gradually on the outside after leaving the backstretch and wore TOWN CAR down in the final drive. TOWN CAR forced the pace and raced ALARMING into submission in the opening half mile, drew clear and saved ground rounding the lower turn, but faltered slightly when the real test came. WEARY FLOWER, rated behind the pace until straightened into the stretch, moved up gamely on the inside, but was in tight quarters through the stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:48. Off 5:51½. Winner, P. Bieber's b. f. (4), by Westwick—Star Emerald. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:41, 1:54 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNCRAX, $10.80, $5.20, $3.20; WEE EMMA, $3.60, $2.60; INSCRIPTION, $2.40.

SUNCRAX, unruly at the post, obtained a running start and drew out with a rush early to the first turn, was then steadied while saving ground and had something in reserve when challenged to hold WEE EMMA safe in the final drive. WEE EMMA slipped through on the inside rounding the first turn, gradually bettered her position and then coming around the leaders in the last three furlongs, made a game bid, but could not get up. INSCRIPTION, a keen factor in the early running, faltered in the last furlong.

Colonials to End Season Tonight in Tilt With W. & J.

George Washington University's uninvited basketball team closes its season against Washington-Jefferson's five at Washington, Pa., tonight, hoping to ring down the curtain with only three losses on a schedule of 17 games.

The Colonials charged down the stretch in fine style, winning their last six games, and a victory tonight will send them under the wire with only three losses, all suffered on the road.

It will be the last game in a Buff and Blue uniform for Capt. Tommy O'Brien, ending a colorful and spectacular career for the Union City, N. J., boy.

Washington-Jefferson has won 11 games while dropping 7, but has won its last 8 games in a row.

Trade Horizon Yields No Sign Of Speedy Rise

But Evidence of Low Point in Some Industries Is Considered Favorable.

New York, March 4.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., says today:

"There is no tangible evidence that business activity will soon show important improvement. Manufacturing schedules are still being maintained on a highly conservative basis, purchasing policies are being geared to immediate requirements and most business men are continuing to mark time until the outlook for prices and business generally, as well as for legislation, is more clearly defined.

"Business sentiment, however, while still highly conservative, is showing some signs of emerging from the deep pessimism which has prevailed for a number of months. This moderate change in sentiment probably reflects:

"Growing evidence that operations in a number of industries have reached at least a temporary low point.

"Relative firmness in the primary raw material markets.

"The feeling that the Administration is adopting a more realistic attitude toward the depression.

"The fact that the usually barometric stock market reached its low point four months ago, and despite further contraction in general business since, stock prices have been showing relative firmness.

"The hope that seasonal influences this spring will promote at least a moderate business recovery and possibly initiate a major upturn.

"While these factors are encouraging, they are not by any means conclusive. It is doubtless true that a number of industries have reached, or have passed, their low operating points for at least several months ahead, but the improvement in prospect for several important lines is not substantial."

The market opened 9 to 12 points lower owing to declines at Bombay and Liverpool and under scattered foreign selling which brought out commission house liquidation. Although offerings were never aggressive, Bombay sources continued to sell during most of the session.

Sea of Selling Topples Wheat 2¾c a Bushel

Buyers Who Had Expected Larger Export Demand Unload Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 4.—Selling rushes on a big scale swept Chicago wheat prices down 2¾ cents a bushel maximum today to season new low price records. Conspicuous among the sellers of wheat futures were many disappointed owners who had been holding on in mistaken belief that an expected broadening of foreign demand would bolster domestic prices. Added to disturbing market effects of prolonged dearth of European buying of United States wheat were much improved moisture conditions for domestic wheat crops both winter and spring.

Assertions were current that the moisture supply would now be ample to furnish a favorable start for 1938 spring wheat.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures displayed little power to rally, and were 2¼@2½ cents under yesterday's finish, May 90⅜@90½, July 85@85⅛, with corn ¼@⅜ down, May 58¼@58⅜, July 60¼@60⅜; oats ⅜@½ off; rye showing 1⅛@1⅛ drop, and provisions varying from 15 cents setback to 7 cents advance.

Mead Johnson Votes 75c Extra Dividend

New York, March 4 (AP).—Mead Johnson & Co. announced an extra dividend of 75 cents and regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on common stock, both payable April 1 to stock of record March 15. Extras of $1.75 were paid in December and 75 cents in October, 1937. Company manufactures diet materials and has plants at Evansville, Ind., and Zeeland, Mich.

National Stamping Omits.

Directors of National Enameling & Stamping Co. took no action on a dividend on the capital stock, "owing to the uncertainty of current business conditions and the outlook for the immediate future," the company announced. A dividend of 50 cents was paid in March last year. The company has plants in the East, Midwest and South.

The Market

Stocks Work Slightly Lower in Continued Slack Trading; Wheat Tumbles.

New York, March 4.—Stocks were shaken down in sales volume of around 500,000 shares. For the first time in three days more gains than losses were recorded, but they couldn't be held. United States bonds were irregular, and dollars were a little higher. Commodities were mixed. May wheat fell 2⅜ cents to 90⅜ cents a bushel.

Most stocks were firm early, but none of them developed much enthusiasm. For a while the steel and chemical shares were the most active. Stocks to gain as much as a point were scarce. Losses also were mostly fractional, except for a few of the preferred. Farm implements recovered a fraction to a point of their previous day's weakness, but the sharp fall in wheat prices held the market in check. Preferred and common stocks of merchandising shares were somewhat unhappy.

General Electric weakened only slightly on the dividend reduction. Steel ruled a fraction higher. U. S. Rubber and U. S. Smelting preferred grained more than a point. Pacific Telephone lost more than a point on the smaller dividend. Dow Chemical dropped 2 points on two sales. Whisky shares moved up. Abraham Straus fell more than 6 points on the first sale of the year. Allis Chalmers was well liked. Oliver sold around its best of the year. Woolworth stiffened. Santa Fe preferred weakened, but the common was steady, as was Southern Pacific, the principal roads serving the flood areas in the Southern California storm belt.

Still on Same Course.

If business thinks it now has to deal with an Administration chastened by the hard times it may have to chalk up another disappointment. In his newspaper interview today President Roosevelt recalled his five years in office, his "objectives," and his accomplishments. He made it clear that he is still trying to do that which has been his aim all along, but that his methods have changed occasionally. Business, in other words, can expect the same lack of friendliness and the same striving for restriction and subjection as it has had to contend with all along, and taxpayers can expect to be soaked.

On the subject of the business depression the President forsook the football field, on which the quarterback calls the plays, and took his listeners out to sea with him. He said the old ship of state was still on the same old course; that last spring it had been necessary to put the helm hard to starboard, and that in the autumn, when the wind veered, the helm had to be put hard a-port to keep the ship on the course.

Anyway, Still Drifting.

All hat jargon may fool the landlubbers. What happened was that last spring the old tub was bowling along at a good cut of speed, rapidly taking the skipper out of soundings and way out where he would have to depend on celestial navigation to find his way. Accordingly he sortened sail—in fact he took nearly everything off her. Then in the autumn he was surprised to find that the ship had drifted near the breakers, or at least he could hear funny noises and the landmarks looked to be those of Hoover harbor. Now the skipper and his mates are trying to get the crew interested in getting on more sail, but the ship is some distance from the trade winds, the pea soup is wormy and mutterings are coming from the fo'cas'le about a Jonah on board.

Hard A-Lee!

An old Wall street salt read President Roosevelt's account of the five-year voyage of the ship of State and particularly the description of the maneuvers of last spring when the helm was put hard to starboard and the ship sailed on the other tack.

"It looks to me," the nautical gent remarked, "when he came about the boom hit him on the head."

General Electric.

General Electric found its business running against the trend in the fourth quarter of last year. Profits exceeded those for the corresponding period of a year ago and for the preceding quarter as well. The directors nevertheless reduced the dividend from 40 cents to 30 cents a share at their quarterly meeting today. It is safe to assume that profits in the current quarter are down by about 25 per cent, which seems to be much better than the experience of many other corporations. General Electric's cash is lower than a year ago and inventories at the end of last year were about a third higher.

Federal Reserve.

Congressman Steagall, the bank reformer, grows critical of the way the Federal Reserve System has been managed in the last two years. His remedy is tighter political control. That is quite according to the best traditions—to double the dose when the patient grows weaker. In a more normal world it might seem odd that, after an experiment of political control over the central banking system any one would think that more complete subjection of banking to politics would improve matters. One of these days a candidate for President probably will have to put a discount rate policy plank in his platform.

Odd Lots.

In commenting on manipulation of Kinner Airplane a day or two ago, reference was made in this column to certain trading on the curb exchange. Kinner was not listed on the New York Curb Exchange. It was on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and the San Francisco Curb Exchange . . . A large part of the contribution asked by Erie to enable it to keep its Cleveland offices going, is coming from New York. Just why New York should contribute to the Cleveland real estate situation might be argued at great length. Incidentally, Wall Street real estate interests ought to put up a great fight to force return of the Erie offices to New York, where they belong. While they are about it they might also work to bring the financial offices of the Missouri Pacific to New York. This business of combining the railroad operating headquarters with the financial headquarters is silly. Whether the rest of the country likes it or not, the New York capital market is the only capital market the country has, and New York is the place for financial managers, no matter where operating executives ought to be . . . Commodity prices are beginning to feel the effects of Government efforts to lift them and, as was to be expected, the rise is principally in that section where it was least needed—namely, farm products. The cost of living is high enough and the depression in manufacture shows clearly enough that price disparities exist between manufactured goods and farm products which will be made worse with a further rise in agricultural products.

Chicago Curb Sets March 14 Death Knell

Chicago, March 4 (AP).—When the closing gong on the floor of the Chicago Curb Exchange sounds at 2 p. m. March 14, trading will cease permanently. The curb, which came into existence nearly ten years ago during the stock boom, will end operations because of lack of business. Dissolution has been authorized by vote of the membership and sanctioned by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Gilbert M. Clayton, secretary, announced today provisions for winding up the exchange's affairs. All trades after March 7 will be on a cash basis. Physical assets will be liquidated and proceeds after expenses and cash reserves will be distributed to the members.

Security Drop 23.2 Billions In Past Year

N. Y. Stock Exchange Year Book Reveals Changes During 1937.

New York, March 4.—Among the facts disclosed in the year book of the New York Stock Exchange, issued today, are the following:

Member borrowing on collateral declined in the year from $1,051,425,161 to $659,219,305.

Reflecting the shrinkage of trading, stock transfer tax collections were $57,434,243 last year, compared with $66,359,326 in 1936.

The heaviest trading last year was 7,288,060 shares on October 19 and the smallest for a full day was 423,760 shares on June 21.

The number of stock exchange firms was 652 against 647 the year before. There was 3,704 partners of members, an increase of 1. Branch offices in 385 cities in 45 States and 8 foreign countries totaled 1,185, an increase of 3.

According to their principal activity, the 1,375 members are classified as follows: members of commission and investment banking firms, 550; specialists, 360; floor brokers, 165; odd lot dealers and brokers, 123; bond brokers, 67; floor traders, 34; private bankers, 9; inactive members, 52; deceased, 15.

Textiles Suffer Record Slump

New York, March 4.—A currently hopeful trend again is manifest in America's billion dollar textile industry, after a year in which high hope of record-breaking profits suddenly crashed in one of the most dizzying declines in business history.

Just a year ago—in fact until midsummer—the textile industry was operating at 124-126 per cent of normal, profits in the first half ranged from 30 per cent to 200 per cent over the preceding year, and there was every reason to believe the industry was headed for a near-record year.

Then in common with most sections of American business, it went into one of the most sudden and unexpected downward swings in its history. The seasonally adjusted Federal Reserve index of production slumped from 115 per cent of normal in August to only 77 per cent of normal in December.

Forty-one out of approximately 60 major companies have reported aggregate net income for 1937 of $11,951,000, which is a 42 per cent decrease from the 1936 total of $20,473,000. Only a few large companies are yet to be heard from. Among those that have reported are American Woolen, Industrial Rayon, Arlington Mills, Manhattan Shirt, and Pacific Mills, which together account for a substantial portion of the industry's total output.

Member Trading 21.22% of Total

By the Associated Press.

Round-lot transactions of New York Stock Exchange members in the week ended February 5 were 21.22 per cent of total exchange dealings, the Securities Commission reported today. Round-lot volume for the period on the New York Stock Exchange of 4,697,080 shares, was 6.9 per cent larger than volume reported on the ticker.

Round-lot transactions of members initiated on the floor were 7.74 per cent of total exchange transactions, while those initiated off the floor were 3.84 per cent, and round-lot dealings of specialists were 9.64 per cent.

On the New York Curb Exchange round-lot volume in the same week was 772,340 shares, or 7.2 per cent larger than ticker volume. Round-lot transactions of members was 18.56 per cent of the total.

Gen. Electric Cuts Common Dividend

New York, March 4 (AP).—Directors of the General Electric Co. today cut the dividend on the common stock to 30 cents a share, compared with quarterly payments of 40 cents through most of 1937 and a year-end payment of $1. The latest dividend is payable April 25 to stock of record March 18.

The company reported that new orders for the first two months of this year dropped to $41,348,000 from $64,229,000, or 36 per cent in the comparable period last year. Preliminary net income for 1937 was $63,547,000, equal to $2.21 a share, against $43,947,166, or $1.52 a share, in 1936. Sales billed last year increased to $349,740,000 from $268,545,000 in 1936.

This compared with 1936 profit of $4,373,707, or $5.13 a share on 750,000 common shares then outstanding.

Wheeling Steel.

Wheeling Steel corporation and subsidiaries reported net profit for 1937, after charges and provisions for Federal surtax, of $4,238,488, equal to $4.11 a share on 563,212 shares of common stock after preferred dividend requirements. This compared with 1936 net profit of $4,115,387, or $4.70 a share on 388,091 shares of common. In 1937 flood losses of $1,189,659 were charged directly to earned surplus.

American Metal.

American Metal Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for 1937 of $4,345,186 after charges and Federal surtax, equal to $3.22 a share of common stock, compared with 1936 profit of $1,726,053 or $1.08 a common share.

SEC Would Foster Small Exchanges

Boston, March 4.—A development of the Nation's smaller securities exchanges outside of New York City, with a policy of "sound competition," among them was advocated here last night by Gaston Purcell, director of the trading and exchange division of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in an address before the membership of the Boston Stock Exchange.

Mr. Purcell emphasized that successful competition by "smaller exchanges" depended upon their control by a management primarily interested in development of the local market and not "toward the maintenance of a primary market in a security of the big New York exchange." This problem, the speaker said, is one to which "the commission is keenly alive." He asked that his hearers submit to the SEC their ideas on the subject.

Curb Irregular After Advance

New York, March 4 (AP). — The curb market closed irregular today after numerous leading issues had lost all or part of initial gains in a last-hour decline. Ahead fractions to a point or more at the close were American Gas & Electric at 26½, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea 47¾, Gulf Oil 40, International Petroleum 31¼, Mead Johnson 100, Niagara Hudson Power 8⅛, Pepperell 72 and United Shoe Machinery 68⅞.

World Gold Output Below Year Ago

New York, March 4 (AP).—World production of gold in January totaled 2,394,000 fine ounces, lowest since April, 1937, and compared with 2,534,000 in December and 2,405,000 in January last year, trade sources estimated today.

United States output slumped to 361,000 fine ounces from 398,000 in December, but was 33,000 ounces ahead of January last year. South African production stood at 988,000 ounces against 991,000 in December and 981,000 a year ago. Canada produced 359,000 ounces, a drop of 3,000 ounces from the preceding month but a gain over a year ago of 30,000 ounces.

G. F. Peabody, Philanthropist, Dies in Georgia

Banker and Politician Was Roosevelt's Associate in Warm Springs Work.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 4.—George Foster Peabody, 85, retired banker, who was widely known for his philanthropies, educational and religious work, died of a heart ailment today at his winter home.

At his bedside were a daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Peabody Waite; a friend, Miss Allena Pardee, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ames, executive director of Yaddo, the Saratoga Springs retreat for artists and literateurs, of which Peabody was president.

Peabody amassed a fortune in banking in New York, climbing rapidly after obtaining a connection with Spencer Trask & Co. as a youth. He was a native of Columbus, Ga.

He was treasurer of Democratic National Committee in 1904-05; served as a director and vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of New York by appointment of President Wilson.

A member of the board of trustees of the Warm Springs foundation, he was associated with President Roosevelt in infantile paralysis research work. He was instrumental in development of the celebrated mineral springs at Saratoga, N. Y.

In 1921, Peabody married Mrs. Katrina Trask, widow of his former business associate. She died within a year. Yaddo, the Trask estate of Saratoga Springs, was then converted to philanthropic uses.

Mrs. Waite, the daughter, issued a statement announcing "simple Episcopal commitment services at the chapel at Jacksonville, Fla., will be held tomorrow or the next day, with memorial services later at Warm Springs and at Yaddo, Saratoga Springs, N. Y."

Bob Burns Says—

In almost every paper you read where some reporter has interviewed a Senator about his "foreign policy," the Senator said he wasn't ready to disclose it. I'm beginnin' to think some of these Senators haven't got any "foreign policy."

It's like the time somebody noticed my Aunt Peachy Simms was looking bad and they said they believed Aunt Peachy was nursing a secret sorrow. Grandpa said, "No, you're wrong—if Peachy did have a secret sorrow, she woulda told the whole town about it!"

What Are Republican Chances in November?

The November elections are eight months off, but the Gallup Poll is already measuring the trend of public opinion on election candidates. Using a staff of more than 600 field reporters, The Gallup Poll asked representative voters "If a congressional election were being held today, would you vote for the Republican, Democratic or third party candidate?" Has sagging employment, wage-cuts and business pessimism cut into the Democratic prestige?

Truant, 16, Kills His Mother for Punishing Him

Stabs Crippled Woman in the Neck With a Kitchen Knife.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 4.—Theodore Danielsen, jr., 16-year-old high school student, told Police Capt. Collins today that he slew his crippled mother because she punished him for truancy.

The boy told police and Assistant State's Attorney Morris Meyers that he stabbed his mother with a kitchen knife in a violent quarrel yesterday afternoon.

Tracked to Hotel.

Authorities said the youth confessed a few hours after he was seized in a hotel where he had registered as "E. Wilson."

"I didn't do it," Capt. Collins said he cried at first, then blurted, "I did it and here's the story:

"I came home yesterday afternoon and told my mother I'd been truant from school for weeks. She was mad. She grabbed me by both cheeks and shook me up. We were in the kitchen.

"I reached back, grabbed the bread knife and stuck it into her neck. I took towels and washed the fingerprints off the knife.

Stabbed Her Again.

"I leaned over and felt mother. She was still warm, so I stuck the knife back in her neck. Then I went downstairs and fed my dog. I closed the basement door so he couldn't follow me. I took $5 of my own money, $5 of my mother's and some of mother's trinkets (a necklace, three rings and several pins) and I started out with the two bags I had packed earlier."

Informed his son had confessed, the father, a salesman for a sporting goods firm, cried, "no, I can't believe it. He couldn't do a thing like this. I will do everything possible."

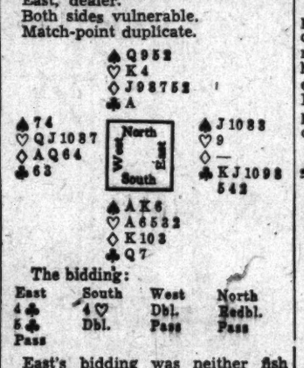
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

All the old homilies have an honored place at the bridge table. The hand described today brings up the familiar "you can't eat your cake and have it too."

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4♣	4♡	Dbl.	Redbl.
5♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

East's bidding was neither fish nor fowl. Originally, he had decided either to shut out the opponents or compel them to enter the arena at a prohibitive level—a level that might give West the opportunitp for a crushing double. Due to South's stubborn refusal to be shut out, this opportunity actually developed and was, of course, promptly seized by West. North's redouble was technically horrible, but perhaps he knew his left hand opponent. At any rate, it worked beautifully. East became panic stricken at the thought that the opponents were about to "wrap up" a redoubled contract and, quite forgetting his original intention, ran like a timid hare to five clubs where, of course, he met the slaughter he deserved.

As I have said so often, it is impossible to play good bridge without courage. East knew that West was not misled by the four club bid, that he (West) was doubling four hearts entirely on his own holding. Thus, East's run-out to five clubs was partly cowardice and partly a case of unwarrantedly "taking charge."

'Women First,' Cries Green in Blaze at A. F. L.

Federation Chief Retires to 7th-Floor Office as 300 Flee Building.

A cry of "Save the women first—then come back and get me!" burst from the lips of William Green, American Federation of Labor president, yesterday as a fire, accidentally started in the basement of the federation's building, sent a billow of smoke to the upper floors, causing 300 persons to rush for exits.

Green's cry was to Cergt. J. O. Hite, of the Second Precinct, who went to the seventh floor to ashertain the situation there. The federation president promptly declared his stand in the rrisis and withdrew into his private office. He was there alone, for the excitement had adjourned a conference he was holding with representatives of the Master, Mates and Pilots and Longshoremen units.

Wax Kettle Flares Up.

The fire started from a kettle of wax that Leo De Thierry, 53, superintendent of the building, was heating. De Thierry's arm was burned and he was given first aid treatment by the Rescue Squad.

Smoke poured up the elevator shaft and stairways. Two persons were overcome, John Krouse and Mrs. Fannie Carr, both federation clerks. They were revived at the scene. It required 30 minutes to bring the blaze under control.

Elevators Halted.

Elevator service was immediately put out of operation, and many of the employes and visitors of the building fled down the outside fire-escapes.

Much of the $3,000 estimated loss was in office supplies. In the goods burned were a number of flags and other materials used in A. F. of L. conventions and special sessions.

In the conference with Green were W. C. Roberts, chairman of the federation legislative committee, and Frank Morrison, the federation secretary. After the blaze was extinguished, the elevators resumed running to enable Green to ride to the first floor.
